BIG FRENCH DRIVE NEAR METZ

A THRILLING INCIDENT OF GERMANY'S SUBMARINE BLOCKADE—Remarkable photograph of the U-36 holding up the Dutch liner Batavier V off the Belgian coast March 18, taken by a BOSTON AMERICAN staff photographer on board the captured ship. After seizing the liner the U-36 led the Batavier V and the Dutch steamer Zaanstrom, also captured that day, through a tortuous network of mines into Zeebrugge. At top the U-36 signalling "stop" to the Batavier V. At bottom, the submarine tender.

BEGINNING OF BIG OFFENSIVE MOVE BY ALLIES

LONDON, April 7. — The French have begun a terrific drive against the German stronghold of Metz, advancing from two directions, in what is believed to be the opening of the gigantic offensive movement of the allies promised for this Spring.

One French line is now near Etain, 20 miles northwest of Metz and the other is at Flirey, 15 miles southeast of the German military base.

The news of the launching of the new movement is contained in both the German and French official dispatches.

CAPTURE HILLS.

The French official statement follows:

"A German detachment with three machine guns had succeeded in crossing to the left bank of the Yser to the south of Dris Grachten, but was attacked and captured by Belgian troops on Tuesday.

"To the east of Verdun an attack in the direction of Etain made us masters of hills Nos. 219 and 221 and of the farms of Haut Bois and L'Hopital.

"At Eparges we have gained ground and maintained our advanced position as well as taking sixty prisoners among whom were some officers.

"In the woods of Ailly and Brule we repulsed all counter attacks and scored fresh progress. At Ban de Sapt and La Fontainelle we blew up with a mines one of the enemy's earthworks."

ABANDON DREI GRACHTEIN.

The German, while calling attention to the beginning of the French drive, declare that the attacks have

SCHOOL GIRLS GAVE CHASE TO LYNN GUNMEN

Helen O'Brien, Helen Purington and Mildred Welch, pupils at the English High School of Lynn, walked into Lynn police station at recess today and told Chief Thomas M. Hurckes that they took part in the chase of the Brown jewelry store gunmen last Monday morning; that they intercepted the two fugitives near the courthouse, but were knocked down, and that they saw the gunmen escape in an automobile.

Soon after eight o'clock Monday Charles F. Brown was choked and beaten into unconsciousness by two well-dressed young men who came into Brown's father's jewelry store at No. 37 Andrews street in the business section of Lynn. The gunmen held up Marshuk Babarian, who tried to help Brown, and then ran into the street, by the rear of the police station and escaped.

Chief Burckes said, after the High school girls had been to his office, that hey jointly told him the following story:

ESCAPED IN AUTO.

"We were going up Liberty street Monday morning on our way to school. One of the boys at the school shouted to us: 'Those two men just held up Brown's jewelry store.' We saw two men running up Washington street toward Essex. We ran after them. They entered a yard. We kept on to Essex street and toward the courthouse. As we arrived nearly in front of the courthouse the two men ran out from the alley at the side of the building and knocked us down. One of us tried to grab the coat of one of the men, but her hand slipped.

"The two men jumped into an automobile which was waiting in front of the courthouse. One took the wheel. The other crouched down in the rear of the machine. They sped up Washington street."

BELIEVE PRINZ EITEL WILL INTERN

NEWPORT NEWS, April 7.—Although not officially announced, it is believed that the German cruiser-raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich will intern, and that Captain Thierichens has informed government officials of this decision.

The report that the vessel had interned gained credence when no attempt was made by the captain to reach the sea last night, despite the fact that everything for such a dash favored him.

Early today the Friedrich still lay at her pier, but everything appeared in readiness for her immediate departure.

Off the Virginia capes, the five allied warships—four British and one French—await a possible dash for liberty by Captain Thierichens.

"I wish you would remain and go with us," was the possibly significant farewell uttered by the Eitel's first officer to Collector of Customs Hamilton, when he visited the Eitel yesterday.

How Submarine Blockade Pictures Were Secured

For weeks the world has read of the attempted blockade of England by German submarines and heard stories of the tenders by means of which the submarines were able to keep away from port for a month at a time. The tenders have continually replenished them with the oil used as fuel and the stores necessary for the feeding of the crew.

Above is shown the first photograph ever taken of a German submarine with her tender.

The circumstances surrounding the taking of these remarkable photographs are as interesting as the pictures themselves.

By ANSEL E. WALLACE.

Staff Photographer of the International News Service and the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Leaving Rotterdam on the Batavier V., Mr. Beach and I expected to be safe in London on the following evening. We had heard of the "submarine blockade," but didn't think that it amounted to much. But it amounted to enough to keep us from reaching England on scheduled time, and to give us some very thrilling moments.

We were captured on the morning following our departure. Beach and I were having breakfast about 9 o'clock when we noticed a stir of excitement among our fellow-passengers.

"Something doing!" said Beach, and we started for the deck.

YEAR IN JAIL FOR LYNN HAIR SNIPPER

John D. Bachelder of Salem was sentenced today in the Lynn court to a year in the House of Correction after pleading guilty to snipping six inches from the braid of fourteen-year-old Rose Sederquist of No. 289 Summer street, Lynn.

The snipping took place yesterday afternoon in a Lynn store, where the little girl was shopping for her mother, and was witnessed by several people, though Rose did not miss her braid until she was nearly home.

Bachelder was detained by a floor-walker. When searched the hair could not be found. A pair of shears was found in a wastebasket near him. The hair was later found in a cell at the police station. The police say Bachelder admitted having it concealed in his mouth when searched.

Bachelder is a barber and was convicted of a similar offence in 1912, for which he served seven months in jail.

JOHNSON LAST TO LEAVE SCENE OF RING DEFEAT

By ED. W. SMITH.

HAVANA, Cuba, April 7.—Havana was completely deserted today by the Americans who came to the island to witness the Willard-Johnson fight.

All that remained after the 10 o'clock boat left the dock was Johnson. He was slated to leave soon for Kingston, Jamaica, there to catch a boat for England.

Willard will start this week to reap in the rich profits which fall to the lot of a new champion. He will make his first appearance on the stage next week, a New York theatre having signed him up for a week's contract for a salary of $5,000.

A peaceful attitude of a week ago was shown again today. Willard was the big scream, and when he left on the boat for Key West with most of the correspondents the town had a deserted appearance.

It happened that the races closed just as the fight was decided and dozens of horsemen wanted to get away on the first boat. The result was a tremendous crush and the company had to put on extra tubs to take care of the traffic.

Some of the sports who departed today were broke, some were affluent, some were jubilant, some were cursing Havana.

All were glad to get away, despite the beauties of the city and the good time.

Willard took his entire camp with him, including Jim Savage, Walter

Old Monmouth Park Hotel Destroyed

LONG BRANCH, N. J., April 7.—The old Monmouth Park Hotel, a famous gathering place for turfmen in the days of the Monmouth Park race track, was burned today. In late years it has been used as a sanitarium.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN'S THEATRE BURNED IN BROCKTON FIRE

BROCKTON, April 7.—The Empire Theatre at Main and School streets, run by John L. Sullivan, former heavyweight champion fighter of the world; and by William F. Sullivan, his business partner but not a relative, was burned out early today.

The Home National Bank, City Hall, police headquarters and several clothing stores in the immediate vicinity of the burning building were endangered. At one time there was fear lest the fire clear a path through the business district.

Every piece of fire apparatus in the city was called out by a general alarm. By strenuous efforts the fire was confined to the two-story wooden theatre building, although tenants of the adjoining building will suffer heavy smoke and water losses.

The damage to the building is estimated at $50,000 by Stewart B. McLeod, administrator of the Washburn estate, which owns the burned building. The contents of the building and the stock in adjoining buildings damaged by smoke and water, are valued at from $25,000 to $50,000 more, by Assistant Chief William F. Dalley of the fire department. William F. Sullivan, part owner of the Empire Theatre, known also as Sheedy's Theatre, estimated his loss at $25,000, with no insurance.

OVERCOME BY SMOKE.

Mrs. Rose Hallahan, who rooms in the second floor of the Washburn building, adjoining the theatre, was overcome by smoke. She was rescued by David Carson and Arnold Bergstrom, who rushed through the smoke-filled building, broke in her door and carried her unconscious to the street. She was the only tenant living in the building.

The fire was discovered at 2:39, it had apparently started in the street floor of the theatre building, at the opposite end of the auditorium from the stage. When the fire department arrived the whole inside of the theatre, in front, was a furnace of flames.

Assistant Chief Dalley, in the absence of Chief Morston, who is sick, was in charge. He ordered a second and then a general alarm.

The theatre is in a cluster of buildings, all of them brick except the Kinney Plumbing Company's plant, to the south of the theatre. Within ten feet of the walls of the theatre is the police station, and within forty feet, the City Hall. On the other side is the three-story Washburn building, with stores in the street floor, offices in the second and several club rooms in the third floor.

BUILDINGS IN PERIL.

In the same cluster of buildings are the Bay State Street Railway offices and waiting room and the Home National Bank, around the corner in Elm street. For over an hour these nearby buildings were showered with blazing embers.

Soon after the arrival of the fire department, the flames burst through the roof of the theatre building, spouting high into the air. With the collapse of the roof, the furnace caused by the four walls of the building, shot a great shower of sparks over the city. Several times these nearby buildings caught fire on the roofs, in the corners of window ledges, and whatever inflammable material offered a hold to the fire.

The members of the company at the theatre were early on the scene, and had to be restrained by the police from trying to dash through the stage door to the dressing rooms in an attempt to save their belongings.

Records were hurriedly removed from the police station, and city hall employes were called out by the assist in the removal of the city records on file at the city hall.

The others suffering losses by fire or smoke and water damage: Howard & Caldwell, men's clothing, Story & Co., women's clothing, Gurney Brothers, jewelers, F. B. Washburn Co., bakers, Bay State Street Railway Company, the Tremaine Electric Company, the Elks Club, the Howard Club, and the Trades Club.

An investigation will be made today to try to determine the cause of the fire. A smouldering cigarette is believed by many to have been the cause.

MILITARY HONORS FOR CURTIS GUILD

Former Governor Curtis Guild will be buried Friday with military honors.

Adjutant-General Charles H. Cole of the Massachusetts Militia has been assigned by Governor Walsh to complete the military arrangements with the family in behalf of the State.

At the conclusion of a conference with Louis A. Frothingham, former Lieutenant-Governor, General Cole announced that the body will be escorted from the family home, No. 124 Malboro street, to the Arlington Street Church by a detachment from ex-Governor Guild's old command, the Lancers.

Six body bearers will be selected from the non-commissioned officers of the Sixth Regiment, of which ex-Governor Guild was formerly captain and adjutant.

Ex-Governor Guild retired from the Massachusetts militia with the rank of major-general. His last official appearance before the Legislature was in behalf of an investigation to determine the military preparedness of the State. In his last speech, he urged the young men of the State to affiliate with the militia.

The funeral will be at noon from the Arlington street Church. The Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham will officiate.

Governor Walsh cancelled all engagements until after the funeral and gave instructions to have flags lowered on all State buildings Friday.

The members of the Executive Councils of 1906, 1907 and 1908—the three years Mr. Guild was Governor—will have places reserved for them at the church. There will also be reservations for Governor Walsh, Mayor Curley, delegations from the House and Senate, and various military, civic and fraternal organizations of which the deceased was a member. Many details have still to be arranged.

MRS. CORNELIA TEVIS, divorced wife of Hart McKee, married for third time in Paris.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 7.—Announcement is made here of the marriage in Paris of Mrs. Cornelia Baxter Tevis, eldest daughter of Governor and Mrs. George W. Baxter of this city, to Evelyn Tomlin, of London and Paris.

He is of distinguished English parentage and for two years has been in charge of the Paris branch of Lloyd's. The British ambassador served as best man. The American ambassador gave the bride in marriage.

The bride is widely known in social circles in this country and Paris, where she has lived for ten years. At eighteen, in 1901, she was married to Hugh Tevis, the California multi-millionaire, who died in Japan on his honeymoon, leaving a posthumous heir.

In 1906 the widow was married to Hart McKee, the divorced Pittsburgh millionaire, and Mr. and Mrs. McKee went to Paris. One child also was born to this union and, with Hugh Tevis, Jr., is now living with the mother.

The McKee marriage resulted in a divorce several years since. The trial attracting international interest. Mrs. McKee resumed her previous married name of Tevis and since then has made her home in Paris.

STORY OF BLOCKADE PICTURES

Here we had a great surprise. We had been captured by a German submarine. The boat was manoeuvring across our stern, and it looked as if the lieutenant commanding was about to come aboard. I dived below to get my cameras, and when I again arrived on deck, we had been hooked.

"MOVIE" CAMERA IN ACTION.

A German lieutenant was on the bridge in command of the ship. I was advised by one of the Dutch officers to get my stuff below or I would lose it. However, it was too good a chance to miss, and having been among the Germans for about four months, I thought I might for this reason be able to get away with a few pictures.

I managed to get my motion picture camera set up on the stern and started grinding on the largest submarine I have ever seen. In fact, I thought at first that we were mistaken and that she was a torpedo boat. The fact that she was fully equipped with wireless and machine guns, with a swarm of sailors running about her deck, convinced me that we had made a mistake. Later I learned that she was one of the new type—the U-36—which the Germans have built since the war.

After circling around us several times, signalling the German officer on our boat, the U-36 started on a quick dash across our stern. I was rather puzzled at that, but I soon found the reason for it.

Her commander had sighted another victim in the distance. This vessel later proved to be the Zaanstroom, a Dutch ship. The submarine landed an officer on her also and started back with her new prize.

All of the time I was grinding away from the stern of the Batavier under cover of the wheel house and was tickled to death that I was getting away with it when Bench rushed up and told me I had better get my machine below, for they were signalling that pictures were being made and that unless I was careful I would lose everything. I decided, however, to risk it a little longer.

ESCAPED GERMAN OFFICERS.

After the Germans had brought up their second prize, we started off on the craziest zigzag trip through the mine field. Later we arrived at a German under-sea boat station far out of sight of land. Here were three submarine tenders or "mother ships," where, after much crazy manoeuvring, we were boarded by an officer from one of the tenders with a guard of twelve marines with fixed bayonets.

About this time I began to get a little nervous and upon the advice of Beach and one of Batavier's officers, decided to duck the cameras. A kindly steward offered to hide them in his stateroom, as he was sure that ours would be searched, for the Germans knew by this time that pictures had been made.

I made a few more shots with my still camera and then ducked. I was quite lucky here, for shortly after the German guards swarmed over the ship, ordering everyone below, where we were kept under a strict guard with curtains down and not even allowed to peep out until we arrived at the German submarine base at Zeebrugge, Belgium.

Nothing exciting happened the first day of our stay in Zeebrugge, except a few visits from German officers. We could find out nothing as to what was to be done with us.

The guards continued to tramp the decks all night, much to the discomfiture of Beach and myself, for one guard's post seemed to end just over our stateroom and at each turn he stamped his hob-nailed boots as if he were "stepping" before the Kaiser.

The next morning, however, things changed. A bunch of husky sailors came on board and proceeded to unload the ship's cargo. A polite young officer was in charge, and having in my possession a letter signed by the Kaiser, I decided to brace him and try to get more pictures with his permission. I wasted my time, however, for he turned me down quick. No pictures could be allowed.

PLACED UNDER ARREST.

Had I made any? Oh, no! I surely would not do anything like that—I only wanted to know if I could. He was very sorry, for he liked Americans, but to make pictures was impossible. I patted myself on the back and prayed that the submarine officer who captured us would not return. He was the only one, I think, who knew pictures had been made. He didn't return and my pictures were overlooked.

That afternoon we were taken from the ship and loaded in a rather rusty looking Belgian train and late that night released just across the Dutch border in a little town called Tevneuzen. Here we were able to get a hotel, and turned in for a rest after so much excitement. All of my baggage had to be left at the station, so the following morning, Beach and I arose early and started to get it.

We made a mistake in the road somehow or other and the first thing we knew we were confronted by about a dozen Dutch soldiers, put under arrest and marched through the village accompanied by crowds of churchgoers in their peculiar costumes.

It was a grand parade, but Beach and I didn't relish it. We seemed to be the whole show. A kindly Dutchman on the way handed me the latest English newspaper and said he hoped we would be treated kindly.

We were released in a couple of hours and later caught a boat to Flushing where a Dutch secret service man put us on the pier and gave us the glad news that we could sail immediately for London.

MISS SEDGWICK ILL IN CALIFORNIA

Word was received here today that Miss Christina Sedgwick, daughter of Alexander Sedgwick, Massachusetts Commissioner to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, living at the Abbotsford, Commonwealth avenue, is seriously ill with typhoid fever at Los Angeles, where she was stricken while visiting her brother, Ellery, who is attending school near Chandler. Miss Christina, accompanied by her mother, left Boston to join her father at the Exposition about two weeks ago. They made frequent stops en route. Mrs. Sedgwick and her daughter had planned a week's visit to the son Ellery at Mesa, a suburb of Chandler.

Miss Christina is one of the prominent junior debutantes and is extremely popular in the younger set of Back Bay.

Probe Finding of Foot in Dump

A woman's foot, which was found in a rubbish dump off Oak street, is the centre of an investigation being made by the Lynn police today. The foot, which is in a bad state of decomposition, is held at an undertaker's room and will be inspected today by Medical Examiner Pinkham. The police are inclined to believe that the foot came from some hospital, as it was wrapped in gauze.

Don't Give Up!

Nowadays, deaths due to weak kidneys are 75% more common than 20 years ago, according to the census. Over-work and worry are the causes. The kidneys can't keep up, and a slight kidney weakness is usual. Neglected,

"Oh, how my back hurts." If you have backache, dizzy spells, sick headaches, or urinary disorders, don't mistake the cause. Fight the danger. More than to diet, habits, etc., and the use of Doan's Kidney Pills ought to bring quick relief. There are hundreds of thousands of people all over the world who recommend Doan's.

A Typical Case in Cambridge

Mrs. Timothy Doyle, 26 Pine St., Cambridge, says: "I often suffered from backache and was annoyed by irregular passages of the kidney secretions. At such times I find Doan's Kidney Pills valuable. They never fail to make my kidneys normal and cure pain across the small of my back. I haven't had any trouble now for about two years."

URGES ACTION ON STATE HOUSE WING

That the State will save $30,000 by the immediate completion of the west wing of the State House was declared today by Chairman John A. Kelliher of the State House Building Commission.

"Not only will the State save that amount of money directly but the construction will provide work for the unemployed," he declared.

YOU can go to the California Expositions

You don't have to travel on an extravagant "Limited" train in order to visit the California Expositions.

Glitter and rosecolored plush and excessive speed have little to do with real comfort and satisfaction. Certainly if economy is attractive, you can just as well save the expense and have money in your pocket to do things with after your arrival.

FEARS NAVAJOS WILL BE HOSTILE

WASHINGTON, April 7.—"Matters look dark if disaffected Indians are joined by Navajos. The Putes must be gotten smeehed and we will go after them, adhering to original plan."

This message, made public today by the War Department in the report of General Scott telling how he brought to terms the Putes, who fought off a Utah posse for days, for the first time showed how serious the officials regarded the situation.

The report says that Scott, after traveling many miles through snow and by stage, reached Mexican Hat on March 12. The Putes were induced to come in for a conference on March 18. "I held a long conference with the Indians that afternoon," says the report. "On the twentieth they all agreed to abide by my decision as to what was best for them. I then informed them that the United States marshal had warrants for the arrest of four of their number. The four men agreed to give themselves up if I would take them personally to Salt Lake City, where they were to be buried over to the United States marshal. I agreed to this and accordingly left Mexican Hat on March 20."

LIEUTENANT PAUL DRESSLER of Adams, killed while fighting under German colors.

MOURN FOR ADAMS MAN LOST IN WAR

ADAMS, April 7.—Mrs. Martha Dressler of Centre street, widow of Lieutenant Paul Dressler of the German army, whose death at the front has just become known to his family, hopes that the Iron Cross which her husband received for bravery on the field will be forwarded to her. No hope of recovering the body is possible, of course, but it is thought that the decoration which the brave officer won may have been saved, and, if so, that it will be sent to his family.

Lieutenant Paul Dressler was born in Germany thirty years ago. He came to this town and worked in the weaving mills. He married Miss Martha Gnitt of North Adams. Twin sons, Paul and Herbert, were born to them.

Dr. Dressler returned to Germany before the war and entered business. Paul, one of the twins, went with him. Herbert stayed here with the mother. The father was called to the colors when the war came. His regiment was sent to the defence of the eastern border of Germany.

Mrs. Dressler has now received word that her husband, after being promoted to be lieutenant for bravery, early in February, was killed on February 26, while fighting against the Russians near Warsow. When he was promoted he was decorated with the Iron Cross and was also offered a furlough, because he had been wounded. He refused the furlough, insisting on remaining on duty.

Harvard Students Probe Tuition Raise

A committee of members of the Phi Beta Kappa Society at Harvard is engaged in investigating whether the proposed increase in tuition at Harvard is justified. P. P. For Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Here in America there is much suffering from catarrh and head noises. American people might do well to consider the method employed by the English to combat this insidious disease. Everyone knows how damp the English climate is and how dampness affects those suffering from catarrh. In England they treat catarrhal deafness and head noises as a constitutional disease and use an internal remedy for it that is really very effective.

Sufferers who could scarcely hear a watch tick tell how they had their hearing restored by this English treatment to such an extent that the dial of a watch was plainly audible seven and eight inches away from either ear.

Therefore, if you know someone who is troubled with catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be easily prepared at home for about 75c and is made as follows:

From your druggist obtain 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength), about 75c worth. Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the formula it gives are usually reasonably quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form should give this recipe a trial and free themselves from this destructive disease.

Boston's Piano King

Crowned King of Low Prices and Big Sales

I CAN sell you New Upright Pianos, 1915 Designs, for less money than you can buy second-hand pianos at many other warerooms.

Last week I cautioned the people to beware of "False Profits" and showed where they amounted in some cases to considerably over $100.

If I can save you $100 at my Sacrifice Piano Sales, why don't you take the trouble to come here and see how I do it?

You know what my motto is—"I would rather sell one hundred pianos at $1 apiece profit than sell one piano at $100 profit."

Don't let any dealer, no matter what make piano he has for sale, make $100 extra profit on you. Attend my sales and save that $100.

HELEN KELLER'S VISIT TO THE FAIR

Deaf, Dumb and Blind Girl Has Wonderful Day at the Exhibition.

By ANNIE LAURIE.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7.—Helen Keller, the deaf girl who is blind, spent the day at the exposition with her wonderful teacher and life companion, Mrs. John Macy.

I took an hour and a half out of my hum-drum every day work and sat and learned of Helen Keller how to hear and how to see.

Miss Keller and her teacher were just going out for a motor ride when I caught them on the steps of a little brown Vine-covered, rose-scented birds' nest in Berkeley.

E. L. Holmes, their host, invited me to go too—and I went and we whirled and whizzed and slid and spun in and out among the green hills of Berkeley and, as we went, Mrs. Macy sat on the other side of Helen Keller and told her whatever it seemed interesting to tell her, with the quick, marvelous telegraphy upon the eager hand of the deaf girl.

It was not necessary to tell Helen Keller very much.

Appears to Know By Superior Instinct.

She seems to know most of it by a kind of superior instinct which makes you feel when you sense it that you are in a strange and exalted company.

She cannot hear one sound, nor see one thing, but now she has learned to speak and speak clearly, carefully and much more distinctly than many people who never think of being called anything in any faculty.

And what she does not say with her voice she sings with her eyes; great, vivid, sparkling, laughing, crying, singing, dreaming, thrilling, prophetic eyes—a blue and forget-me-nots and fringed with dark lashes as a clear pool of water is fringed with trees.

"I am so glad to be here," said Helen Keller, speaking very slowly and very distinctly as one speaks who translates his thoughts into the spoken words of a foreign tongue. "Here at the Golden Gate."

Stiff, stiff—she drew a quick breath of tremulous delight.

"The eucalyptus," she said, "now the acacia rose. Tell me, do you think she will smell like this when we reach the pearl gates of Paradise?"

"And the violets—they are a song in the air.

"I learned to know the wild yellow violet the year I learned to speak my first word"—and the fluttering hands were clasped in a gesture as simple and natural as the smile of a little child. "They have lived in my heart ever since.

"The exposition—what a wonderful thing to see. The statues —the glorious statues—" The blue eyes fairly blazed and the quick hands carried some great image in the air.

"I love them all," she said, "but best the Indians and the horses.

"I Believe Now I Know How Color Feels."

"They were so alive, so free, so strong and the columns of the great buildings — I put my hands on them but they made me happy.

"The colors — I could not see them but do you know," she smiled wistfully—"do you know I believe since I was at the exposition I know how color feels. It cannot be any more beautiful to your eyes than it was to my mind.

"The Palace of Fine Arts, my heart ached and then it danced when I walked along and put my hands on those statues there. There is one of a little boy with a flower on his head. Oh" — the eager, tremulous love in the radiant face was almost hard to see.

"And then," she went on, "I saw the incubator—the babies—the triplets."

She cuddled her arms close to her heart, as if she held something precious there.

"I held them," she said. "Yes and I hugged them too and oh the little one I tried to hug me."

She turned to Mrs. Macy and telegraphed excitedly upon her willing palm. Mrs. Macy laughed and telegraphed back, and then the both laughed together.

"She says she wants to see those incubator babies the very first thing when she comes back to the fair on Monday," said Mrs. Macy.

"I found a friend at the fair," said Helen Keller. "We understood each other the moment we began to talk. Captain, the horse—I asked him to pat three for me—tap, tap, tap—he did it, and how proud she was that he understood.

"I know just how he felt, and he knew I knew, for he put out his nose on my arm and said, 'I love you. Do you love me?' in the horse language.

Always Dreaming of the Stars.

"The lights at the fair—they must be wonderful. I am always dreaming of the stars, and sometimes I dream of the moon—now I shall dream of those wonderful lights.

"How glorious it is to be a human being and make such beauty grow!

"Do you know where I went this morning?" said Helen Keller, leaning to me as a child leans when he has a wonderous secret to tell. "I went to the polls"—she leaned back and laughed—then her face was serious. "But it is no joking—this voting. I am so anxious for the day to come when we shall all vote—we women.

"That is what this war is going to help, I think.

"Women will see that they must have something to say about a war, if they are to give their sons to fight it."

Mrs. Macy began to telegraph and Helen Keller sat spellbound at the message.

Defends the Hills of New England.

"Ah," she cried when the message was through. "Just as I imagined. These hills are soft and coaxing and the yellow poppies sprinkle like grass as the stars sprinkle the sky — how lovely, how lovely.

"But our hills back in New England—you shall not make me incomsiant to them with all your beauty, Miss California.

"They are strong and rugged, grim—but, Oh, they are enduring—they are loyal," she put her speaking hand for an instant to the face of the woman who taught her to read and speak and the woman smiled and took the caressing hand in her own for a loving instant.

"My teacher is from New England," said Helen Keller, "and if for no other reason I shall always love the New England hills for her sake."

And then we talked of those wonderful first lessons and how hard they were to learn and of the strange sense of being, all at once one with the rest of the world.

"But I am so happy," insisted Miss Keller, the deaf girl who is blind, "so very happy—every one is so good to me and I meet such wonderful people and they are all so patient with me and they tell such wonderful things.

"This morning I got a letter from Brieux, the great French dramatist. Just think of his taking the trouble to write to me!

"I met him not long ago and he spoke to me in French and I understood by reading his lips with my finger tips and we agreed about so many things. He was pleased and surprised to find that way over in America I, who am so far out of the every-day run of things, agreed with him, a Frenchman, a man of the world and a genius, about so many things. We are all so much alike we human beings, are we not?

"Love All There Is of Life."

"At first I was afraid of people —big people who have done big things—but now I know that the bigger a man is and the higher the place a woman occupies in the world, the simpler and more easy to know they are. And they talk to me of such things and make me so proud to be part of life in these great times of ours, 'What do I think counts most of all in life—for happiness, for success, for achievement?'

She did not hesitate an instant. "Love," she said, "that is all there is of life—isn't it, teacher?"

And teacher smiled and nodded yes—and my eyes were suddenly a little dim.

Helen Keller, born blind, born deaf, born mute—how high she sits above us all—aloof as a spirit. Who would dare to come to her with anything but the best he had to offer?

When you have heard her speak and watched her face a while you begin to wonder if we could all speak better than we do, and of things more worth while—we, all of us, if we lived as she does, so far from the world of small and sordid thoughts.

And through the green fields and into the heart of her velvet hills we went and out into the canyon and the smell of growing trees, and Helen Keller felt—every bit of it—more than thousands of people ever feel anything.

"The air—it smells of sunshine —yes, and the rain, too. I can smell the rain back there in the trees. It must be lovely to hear it when it falls. I love the feel of it on my face—they say you have no thunder here nor lightning—what a land of peace!

110,000 BRITONS TAKE THE PLEDGE

LONDON, April 7.—When the cabinet met today to consider the drink question more than 110,000 Britons had pledged themselves to David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, to "go on the wagon" during the remainder of the war. Most of the promises of total abstinence had been made by letter to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who is the father of the prohibition movement in England.

While a number of questions were on the cabinet's program of business the chief matter was that of prohibiting or at least limiting the sale of drink in the United Kingdom.

Reports from various interests concerned in the war upon drink were reviewed by the cabinet. It is understood that advice was received from experts upon the expediency of barring drink from the army and navy.

When the cabinet went into session belief was expressed that no definite decision would be reached at the meeting, but that preliminary steps would be taken upon which definite action could be based later.

Numerous protests against absolute prohibition have been sent to Premier Asquith, chiefly from the manufacturing districts of England and Scotland.

One of the latest public figures to enter the fray upon the side of prohibition is Bramwell Booth, head of the Salvation Army.

Machine Beaten at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, April 7.—Charles Heintzeman won the Republican mayoralty nomination by a plurality of 2,826 over former United States District Attorney John Philip Hill in yesterday's primary. Hill was supported by the Republican machine. James Preston, the present Democratic incumbent, was unopposed.

BRITISH TORPEDO BOATS RESCUING GERMAN SAILORS AFTER SINKING OF GERMAN BATTLESHIP.

VON HINDENBURG CALLED TO WEST

LONDON, April 7.—The activities of the French and German forces between the Meuse and the Moselle are rapidly taking the proportions of an important battle. For the first time since the French offensive began in this district, the German War Office has admitted French gains. Both sides are rushing up re-enforcements toward St. Mihiel, the apex of the German wedge, and reports from both Paris and Berlin say that the fighting is becoming terrific.

The official bulletin from the war office at Berlin is in itself an indication of the importance of this movement, but added to this and as a further indication that the threatening situation in the Champagne district is viewed with apprehension, comes the news that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, the hero of Germany's great victory in the Masurian Lake region, has been ordered from the eastern to the western front.

The hottest fighting of the last forty-eight hours has been in the vicinity of Pont-a-Mousson, from which town the German lines extend westward to St. Mihiel. Here the struggle has been going on day and night and despite the desperate character of the German defensive, the French seem to have crept slowly forward.

The German War Office says that the fighting in the neighborhood of Fliry, a small village a few miles to the west of Pont-a-Mousson, has been very bitter. Fighting is also going on in the vicinity of Ailly and Apremont, which are still further to the west of Pont-a-Mousson.

The French attacks in the neighborhood of Verdun do not seem to have been directed with so much vigor which would seem to indicate that it is the object of the French general staff merely to keep the German forces engaged at that part of the St. Mihiel wedge to prevent the transfer of any troops to the locality of Pont-a-Mousson, where the centre of the drive appears to be focussed.

The latest news clearly indicates the French objective, which is to cut off the German forces at St. Mihiel from their base at Metz by a quick movement north from Pont-a-Mousson to the St. Mihiel-Metz road, upon which the Germans depend for their supplies. Since April 1 the French forces have taken and held the towns of Fey-en-Haye and Regnieville. Regnieville is but one and one-half miles west of Pont-a-Mousson, and its capture gave the French access to important roads leading toward Vigneulle, an important railroad centre in the St. Mihiel-Metz line.

In the French offensive nearer St. Mihiel itself important gains have been registered.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 7.

FURIOUS BATTLE IN CARPATHIANS

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.

PETROGRAD, April 7.—Reinforcements of German infantry and artillery have reached the Austro-German armies in the Carpathians and the fighting in the Beskid ranges south of Dukla and Lupkow passes has grown into a combat of maniacal fury. Field Marshal von Hindenburg, German commander-in-chief in the eastern theatre of war, has sent a group of his most trusted officers to help direct the movements of the Austro-German forces.

Russian troops are pouring through Hostock pass, the latest mountain defile captured by the forces of Grand Duke Nicholas, Russian commander-in-chief.

A semi-official report was issued here today giving details of recent Russian operations. It follows:

"Poland—On April 5 Russian artillery destroyed a bridge over the Rosogo on the Oustroleka-Myszyniec road east of Walch (Zawady).

"Galicia—From March 26 to April 3 in the sectors of Baligrod and Uszok pass the Russians captured 32,155 privates, 278 officers, 11 army surgeons, 17 big guns and 101 maxims.

FORCED TO ADMIT DEFEAT.

"In spite of our continued success and our persistent progress in the Carpathians, Austrian communiques persist in announcing that their attacks against the Russian forces are successful. The Austrian general staff was forced to admit in its communique of April 2 that the Austro-German forces were compelled to fall back in the region of Cisna on the Solinka river, Beresehy and Gernia.

"At daybreak on April 4 our advance guard consisting of a brigade supported by artillery took the offensive from Zanoschine towards Okna, northeast of Czernowitz (in Bukowina). On the Okna front the Austrians held good positions.

"We attacked with the bayonet and captured the position after a sanguinary encounter. We repulsed counter attacks, annihilating two battalions of Honved troops. We captured 1,000 privates, twenty-one officers and eight machine guns. This was our second successful action in that quarter during the past week."

FREEMYSL VICTORY GROWS.

The number of Austrian prisoners taken at Freemysl has been fixed in official dispatches from Warsaw at 112,850 unwounded privates, nine generals, 237 other officers and about 6,000 sick and wounded men. All these prisoners have been removed into the interior of Russia. The dispatch continues:

"The sick and wounded that were able to make the journey to the detention camp were attended by 129 Austrian surgeons and 100 orderlies who were kept at the front conditionally. In the fall of Freemysl we took a greater quantity of war material than was first known to exist there. Up to the present we have secured 900 cannon, many of them in good order and every day we discover hidden ammunition depots. Many guns and rifles which were thrown into the San River by the Austrians are being recovered."

It is reported from Bucharest that 10,000 peasants from Bukowina have reached the Roumanian frontier seeking food. Starvation prevails in Bukowina, and Czernowitz, the chief city, has been practically destroyed by repeated sieges. Peasants from northern Bukowina report hard fighting on the border of Bessarabia, where the Russians are locked with the Austrian army of invasion.

been repulsed and say nothing of the gains reported by Paris in the region before Metz.

The Berlin official statement says:

"The village of Drei Grachtem in West Flanders, which the Germans occupied on April 4, was raked by artillery fire from heavy guns and also from mine-throwers. For this reason we abandoned the position last night.

"In the Argonne forest a French attack broke down under the fire of the German Chasseurs.

"Northeast of Verdun the French advance got only as far as our outer works.

"East and Southeast of Verdun French attacks failed with extraordinary heavy losses. Two French battalions were annihilated by German fire on the Combres heights.

"Near Ailly (In the vicinity of St. Mihiel) our troops delivered a violent counter attack which threw the French back into their old positions.

"Near Apremont, French attacks were unsuccessful.

"Other French attacks, near Flirey (in the Woevre district), failed completely. Numerous corpses dot the ground before the German lines.

"On the western border of Priest Wald (Forest of Le Prêtre) one of our battalions drove back strong French forces from the 13th regiment after bloody fighting with the bayonet.

"Despite a blizzard fighting has been going on at Harrannawillerl Kopf since yesterday afternoon."

Taube Bombs Kill 12 Women in Church

BOULOGNE, April 7. — During religious services on Sunday afternoon a German aeroplane of the Taube type dropped bombs on the church at Niepkerke, near Ypres.

There was a large congregation present, and besides numerous cases of serious injuries suffered, twelve women were killed outright.

Find Germans Sank Norwegian Boat

CHRISTIANA, April 7.—The maritime commission, which investigated the sinking of the Norwegian tank steamship Thorvin in the English Channel, reported today that she had been torpedoed by a German submarine. It is officially announced that the Norwegian government will demand $67,600 compensation from Germany.

RUSSIANS SINK 6 TURKISH SHIPS

PETROGRAD, April 7.—Six Turkish ships of war and one big transport have been sunk and two of the finest cruisers in the Sultan's navy have been badly damaged in Black Sea operations, according to an official announcement from the Russian Admiralty.

The Admiralty, in a review of operations since December 12, says:

"Russian mine laying operations off the Bosphorus have given satisfactory results. The Turkish cruiser Hamidieh struck a mine and was badly damaged. A few days later a Turkish cruiser of the Reis type was sunk in the same region.

"On January 2 a large transport was sunk. On December 26 the cruiser Sultan Selim (formerly the German cruiser Goeben) was seriously damaged. On January 21 another gunboat of the Reis type was sunk. On February 15 another gunboat was destroyed. A few days later a Turkish torpedo boat destroyer was blown up and at the same time the other Turkish torpedo boats were lost.

"It is officially reported that fighting is in progress between Turkish and Russian land forces on the Black Sea littoral near Artwin in Transcaucasia."

That an intermittent bombardment of the Dardanelles forts is being carried on by units of the Anglo-French fleet is shown by the following official announcement of the Turkish War Office today:

"On April 4 two enemy cruisers unsuccessfully bombarded the Turkish batteries at the western entrance to the Dardanelles. One cruiser was struck by the fortress fire."

The Turks claim a victory over the Russians in the Transcaucasus in the arena of operation. The following statement concerning the situation there was given out:

"The enemy attacked our advance guards north of Ischkan. After violent fighting for eight hours the Russians were driven across the frontier. We occupied Russian villages south of Tauskkert."

Boy Shoots Playmate.

WORCESTER, April 7.—While loading a repeating rifle, Adelbert O'Keefe, fifteen, of No. 15 Ingalls street, accidentally shot Leon Sharon of Gould street, Millbury, a playmate.

GUNMEN PURSUED BY SCHOOL GIRLS

Chief Burckes took the girls' names and addresses.

Mrs. Fred S. Fessenden of Lloyd street told Chief Burckes that she saw two men, answering the description of the bandits, jump over the fence between her yard and the Hartlett-Rowland Shoe Company's premises and continue toward Washington street and the direction of Pine Grove Cemetery. This is the direction the men were first said to have gone Monday.

Inquiry about automobiles in front of the postoffice revealed that the machine of a well-known local contractor was in front of the building for some time Monday morning and that the contractor drove it away in due time.

Boston Man's Kin Prisoner on the Eitel

RICHMOND, Va., April 7.—Governor Stuart, it became known today, has received a letter from W. M. Bell, a British subject of Somerset, Bermuda, asking him to endeavor to bring about the release of his son, Oliver Hilliard Bell, held a prisoner on the German cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich at Newport News, because he refused to sign papers pledging himself not to take up arms against the German government.

Bell said that his son's mother was a niece of George S. Hilliard of Boston, formerly a Massachusetts legislator. He also said that he was appealing to President Wilson through his personal friend Judge Alton B. Parker of New York.

BOSTON MAY SEE 'HYPOCRITES' FILM

The owners of the "Hypocrites" film are wrestling in New York with the problem of draping "Truth" so the film may be put on in Boston next Monday if possible.

"Hypocrites" is the three-act photo-play which was given a special veiw for Mayor Curley and the police and city censors before offering for public entertainment. The Mayor objected vigorously to the undraped figure of "Truth," one of the allegorical characters, as portrayed by Margaret Edwards. The problem then became, "How can 'Truth' be draped?" It meant that every one of the little figures of Miss Edwards on the thousands of feet of film must somehow be covered or draped.

Hiram Abrams, president of the Famous Players Film Company of New England, and Carl H. Pierce, special representative of Hoswortb, Inc., makers of the photo-play, are in New York now consulting film experts.

The Boston office of the Famous Players Film Company received this word today from President Abrams:

"While we have a difficult problem to meet in covering up the form of Miss Edwards, still we believe we shall be able to qualify. If we do, we hope to open in one of the most prominent theatres in Boston on Monday next, so that the public will not be delayed any longer than necessary in having a view of this film, which certainly presents one of the most remarkable and beautiful bits of photography ever undertaken."

BOSTON MAN KILLS SELF IN BERMUDA

Theodore L. Nance, a former Boston newspaper man and for the past five years a bond salesman with the firm of Baker, Ayling & Co. of No. 50 Congress street, committed suicide at the Hamilton Hotel, Hamilton, Bermuda, according to dispatches received today.

He was found in his room with his throat cut by a razor. An inquest revealed no apparent cause for the suicide.

According to the Hamilton dispatches, Nance arrived at the Bermuda hotel on March 19 with letters of introduction to many prominent business men. Since that time he has been soliciting orders for his bond concern.

In 1902, after graduating from De Pauw University in Indiana, Nance took up a graduate course at Harvard. He completed his studies at the Cambridge university in 1904. Shortly after leaving Harvard he joined the editorial staff of a Boston newspaper. In 1910 he gave up newspaper work.

Mayor Urges Federal Immigration Period

Mayor Curley has stated that because of health conditions in Europe at the present time and what they are likely to be for some years after the close of the war, he is in favor of a Federal law that would prohibit immigration to this country from Europe for a term of five years after the war. He also declared that no American should go to Europe within three years after the war.

Man Is Injured on U. S. Submarine

NEWPORT, R. I., April 7.—Ensign Edward J. Gillam, formerly in command of the submarine E-2, has been under medical treatment at the naval hospital in Las Animas, Colorado, for several months. His illness is supposed to be due to the effects of an accident on the submarine in maneuvers off Brenton reef lightship last September, while she was submerged fifty feet, the same kind of accident possibly that befell the F-4 outside Honolulu harbor a few weeks ago.

DIVORCE GRANTED TO DR. BEERING

Dr. Frederick W. Beering of No. 61 South street, Jamaica Plain, has been granted a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Mary J. Beering. Judge Chase has handed down the decision. Misconduct is the ground upon which the divorce is granted.

The physician has also been given the custody of his son, Herbert, fifteen.

Mrs. Beering contested the divorce bitterly. Dr. Beering charged that he and several detectl en broke into the house at No. 11 Kelston street, where his wife was living last November, flashed electric lights inside, and caught Mrs. Beering emerging from her room in her nightrobe. They also found Lester Lamb, who was named in the suit.

No Progress Report in Raising F-4

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Admiral Moore, in charge of the work of locating and raising the lost submarine F-4 at Honolulu, today reported to the Navy Department that no results had been obtained thus far, although the rescue force was working overtime.

BEAUTY REQUIRES Grace and Symmetry.
PHY-THY-RIN MAKES YOU THIN.

Obesity detracts from beauty and spoils symmetry and gracefulness. How many times you hear the remark: "She would be beautiful if she wasn't so fat." There's no reason why one should be stouter than they desire to be, when there's so simple a means of reduction as the use of the grain Phy-thy-rin tablets, which can be secured at any first-class drug store. These tablets, taken according to directions, will reduce the flesh gradually without the inconvenience of dieting or exercising. After you use them awhile you will be charmed and surprised at the way your weight is decreasing, and you'll feel good as a result.

There's nothing harmful in the use of these Phy-thy-rin tablets, as they are a combination of pure and concentrated approved medicines and are a boon to fat people.—Advertisement

A Man and His Wife

Isabel Has a Fine Time at Ida Ferris' Party Without Her Husband

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XXX

Copyright, 1913, Star Company.

"THAT'S what marriage does to a man!"

Isabel murmured these words as once more she turned to her mirror and gazed at the image reflected there. She knew she was pretty tonight—much prettier than usual. Yet to the man who had married her she was just an ordinary person, one of whom he was sure that he did not bother to pay her compliments. The spotlessness of his necktie and the neatness of the hair were uppermost in his mind. Yes—that's what it meant to be married.

It was almost time for Mr. Duval to be here. In ten minutes she must be ready, for she would not keep her escort waiting.

"Come in!" she called in response to a knock at her door.

Cynthia entered, her hat and coat on. "Before you ask me, Mr. Hamilton's dinin' out," she said, "I thought you wouldn't mind if I was to go out earlier than usual. Can I go now?"

"Certainly you may," Isabel replied promptly. She was glad that the girl was going out at once. It was evident that Cynthia did not know that John was not to be with his wife this evening. The maid would be away before Duval came. How this simplified matters!

"I hope you an' Mr. Hamilton has a good time," Cynthia remarked with a patronizing smile. "Good evenin', ma'am." The door closed behind her and Isabel drew a sigh of relief. The coast was clear. There would be nobody to gossip about her movements. Even the hall-boy need not know that the man with whom she was going was not a brother, a cousin or some other near relative.

When she was ready she decided to go down-stairs so that she could see the cab as soon as it drew up to the curbing. Then the hall-boy would not discern, in the dim light outside, that the man who called for her was not her husband. She had hardly reached the lower hall when she saw the cab approach the house, and by the time the occupant had alighted she was on the sidewalk. As the boy had opened the front door for her she had said hastily: "I will run right out and save Mr. Hamilton the bother of coming for me."

"My dear Mrs. Hamilton!" Duval exclaimed. "Why did you not wait and allow me to help you down the steps? You might have slipped."

She laughed excitedly. "Oh, I never slip!" she said. Then she remembered. "We had a perfect evening," she told Ida Ferris as she bade her good night. Then she caught herself in time and added: "The cabs back from Mrs. Simmons' reception, and added with another laugh, "except on rainy and slippery nights."

Duval helped her carefully into the cab and seated himself beside her. "You are looking mighty well tonight," he remarked approvingly. "While I am sorry for Hamilton's loss—that he cannot go to this dinner—I also consider that his loss is my gain."

SHE WONDERS IF SHE IS REALLY VERY SORRY

"Thank you," she rejoined fervently she wondered if Hamilton would be sorry that John could not go this evening. If he, instead of Duval, were here, he and she might be arguing about something—but she was ashamed of her disloyal thought. Of course she wished John were here.

She wished it again when, glancing around the dining room as she entered, she noted that not a man present was as handsome as John. She wanted to "show him off" to Ida.

"I am so sorry my husband could not come," she told her friend, a note of emphasis in her voice. "I want you to know him. But you will meet him before long—for you and Mr. Ferris must dine with us soon."

"It will have to be after Frank returns from the business trip he starts on tomorrow," Ida said. "Unless," with a mischievous laugh, "I borrow a leaf from your book and get some other man to take his place."

It was only a jest, but Isabel felt herself flush hotly. Her friend saw the blush and regretted her speech. These newly-weds were always sensitive. "Seriously," she added quickly, "I know how hard it was to persuade you to come here without your husband. As I see how pretty you are at this moment, I am dreadfully sorry for him because he cannot be here. But I suppose he saw you before you left and pronounced you perfect. That," confidentially, "is one nice thing about a husband. He is always so proud of one's attractions. There's no need for me to tell you that you never looked sweeter than you do tonight—for of course your John told you that only a little while ago."

"Unfortunately, he had to leave home before I was ready," Isabel replied.

SHE HAS A MORE THAN HAPPY TIME

"A fib," she thought, "but my pride drives me to it. At any rate, if John did not tell me how nice I look, others have told me. And I mean to have the best time I know how to have."

"The 'time'" was even more delightful than she anticipated. The dinner was just what it should have been, and course followed course in an orderly sequence that filled Isabel's hostess-friendly soul with envious admiration. Ida Ferris made it plain that Mrs. Hamilton was the guest of honor. She put the host at Mr. Ferris' right hand at the table, deferred to her frequently, she and her girl to talk and to express her opinion on various topics. On Isabel's right sat David Duval—interesting and attentive.

The young wife was careful as to the quantity of wine she drank—taking only enough to give her a comfortable glow and to make her overcome any self-consciousness that she might have felt at the conspicuous role she was called upon to play. She had little appetite, her excitement depriving her of desire for food.

But she felt a delicious sense of exhilaration as she appreciated that there was nobody present who had the right to criticize her, nobody to whom she was accountable for what she did, nobody of whom she could suspect. Until now she had not realized how often jarring suspicions and jealousy had marred her enjoyment of John's society.

"I had a perfect evening," she told Ida Ferris as she bade her good night. Then she caught herself in time and added with a tear above it: "I've been John's absence," she supplemented.

"Oh, well," Ida said lightly, "we'll have him some other time. And, my dear, we were extremely lovely tonight—a tremendous success."

To Be Continued.

Why Dogs' Noses Are Cold

When your faithful old dog pokes his nose into your hand, even your affection cannot prevent a little shiver, because the nose is cold. Why is it? When the body of a dog is at work, why should this one spot be different from all the rest of him?

The old fable tells us that when Noah tried to get all the animals out to the ark some of them were troublesome, and he had to get a dog to help him drive them in. Because of this the dog was the last to enter the ark. There was no room left, so he had to stand in the doorway with his nose outside in the wet, and it never has been warm since.

Science gives quite another explanation of the matter. The coldness of the dog's nose, is, it says, due to the fact that it is kept moist all the time in order to enhance his sense of smell. And, of course, as the moisture is evaporating all the time, it keeps his nose cold.

A dog depends a great deal on his powers of smell, especially in the wild state, and it is because of his keenness of scent that he is valuable to man for hunting purposes. In addition to the olfactory or smelling nerves inside of a dog's nostrils, the whole black membrane around the nose is very sensitive, and this sensitiveness can only be retained by moisture. Thus it is that when a dog's nose is dry and warm he is ill and needs doctoring.

Love's Safest Retreat

By STELLA FLORES

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

WHEN Love has played all day in the sunlight and flowers, or finished walking on a dangerously fine thread stretched tightly between two flaming hearts, when perhaps he has had a severe tumble and bumped his little self black and blue, then he longs for a safe haven where he can lay his curly head against a true heart and sleep.

Without a second's hesitation he wings his way past all the joyous young couples, until he reaches the fireside of an old pair whose hair has turned white. With a little sigh of content and a yawn he tucks his curly head in the woman's soft lap and falls asleep.

No roses are sweeter than those that blossom in the land of memory and dreams, and their thorns have ceased to hurt. There the bent figures of the old couple grow straight once more—both are young again, living over the exquisite days of their courtship. And little Love never brings more happiness to any hearts than to those that have grown old together.—STELLA FLORES.

Antidotes for Curiosity

The Stenographer and the Bookkeeper Discuss the Nagging Wife and the Cure

By DOROTHY DIX

"I SEE," observed the Bookkeeper, "where another martyr has gone to his reward."

"Who's that?" asked the Stenographer.

"A man out West," replied the Bookkeeper, "who did his humble best to elevate the female sex by suppressing the wife's curiosity in it. They hanged him for it, but it has ever been the fate of the reformer to be misunderstood and persecuted, and some day I shall journey to his lonely tomb and shed a tear above it."

"What did the gentleman do to win such a round of applause from you?" inquired the Stenographer.

"The evidence at the murder trial showed that he was married to a wife who was a human terror, and that he could not go to his daily work without having her put him on the rack on his return and drag out every trivial thing that had happened during the day," replied the Bookkeeper. "He testified that the minute he put his foot on the doormat she'd begin a regular catechism that would go like this:

"What girls have you seen today?"

"Who were they?"

"Were they pretty?"

"Do you think they are as good looking as I am?"

"Would you marry one of them if I died?"

"Would you commit suicide if I died?"

"If you married again after I died would you love your second wife as much as you do me?"

"The poor simp," murmured the Stenographer sympathetically.

"Well," continued the bookkeeper, "the unfortunate fellow stood it as long as he could. He even did the best he could by trying to reply in a way that would please her, but he never could guess the answer right. No matter which way he lied it was the key for wifey to go into hysterics, and so one day he ended the domestic civil service examination by taking his gun and blowing off the lid of the question box. It was a funeral for wifey all right when he got through answering her last kind inquiries."

"That was no way to treat a lady," said the Stenographer, "but I am willing to admit that as a discouranger of curiosity he was a headliner.

"And yet they hanged him for it," sorrowed the Bookkeeper. "I wonder why the poor gink didn't demand his constitutional rights to be tried by a jury of his peers—a jury of married men, for I'm wise that no married man would have brought in that verdict.

"Do you know, what drives a man to drink? It's when he gets home at night, tired and worn, and hungry, and nerve racked to have his wife begin to put him through the third degree before he can get his hat off.

"You knows how she tears it off. 'Where have you been, WHERE have you been? Where HAVE you been? Where have YOU been? Where have you BEEN?'

"The wonder to me is that this woman in the West is the first one that's gotten murdered for it."

"Oh, I don't know," replied the Stenographer, "when it comes to wanting to know where the partner of your bosom has been, women are not the only interrogation points. There are others, but the trouble is that men don't have to answer unless they want to, but a woman has to be always ready to prove an alibi.

"But you are all to the good when you say that women's curiosity is forever getting them in trouble. Lot's wife isn't the only fresh lady who had been turned into a pillar of salt by looking back at the wrong time and seeing what she was never intended to see. There are plenty of other women who could have been packed down in brine in the tears they have shed over the things they had no business peeking into.

"And the questions women ask their husbands look as if they had hate in their bellies, don't they? If a man meets a weller looking doll than his wife is, what does she want to know it for? And what makes her ask him such a fool question as whether he will marry again or not if she dies? If he is a gentleman he is bound to lie to her."

"The less we know the less we have to worry about," observed the Bookkeeper, sententiously.

"That's the idea," agreed the Stenographer, "curiosity for the single, credulity for the married. Before a woman is married, she should investigate a man with a search warrant and a spot light. After she is married she should wear blinders."

"Right-O," said the Bookkeeper.

Another "Right-O" Story

Our Fastest Travelers

And Our Greatest, Too, Are Our Fingers. Read and Believe

HOW many stenographers have ever stopped to think of the distance their fingers travel in a day, a week, or a year? Their fingers are the most amazing travelers in creation and capable of going enormous distances without the fatigue that would affect the feet and legs in performing a similar journey. In ordinary handwriting the hand may travel, according to an expert, 10,000 miles in a year and not indicate imprisonment.

Reckoning on the basis of these figures, it is estimated that the fingers must travel at least ten times as far, which means that the dexterous manipulator of the keyboard of the typewriter does a finger journey of 100,000 miles a year.

This question of how far the fingers travel in the case of typists has aroused not a little interest among scientists who have also made investigations as to the distance the fingers of an expert pianist travel in the same time, working as continuously and at as high a speed.

It is reported that Sir James Pagot some years ago made a calculation of the expenditure of brain and muscle required for a performance on the piano. He asked a famous pianist to play one of the swiftest pieces of music known to her, a presto by Mendelssohn. The time it occupied was taken and the number of notes counted. She played 5,800 notes in four minutes and three seconds, rather more than 24 notes per second. "Certainly," said Sir James, when reporting on the experiment, "there were no fewer than seventy-two distinct variations in the currents of nerve force transmitted from the brain to the muscles in each second, and each of these variations was determined by a distinct effort of the will.

"There were at least four conscious sensations for each of the twenty notes played in each second. That is to say, there were ninety-six transmissions of force from the brain to nerve fibres along their course to the brain in each of the same seconds."

Do You Know That—

In time of peace there is no port in the world into which so many herrings are taken as Great Yarmouth, England; and Lowestoft is not far behind. In 1913 the herrings landed at these two ports together numbered 1,362,000,000.

Before the war the chemical industry in Germany was very prosperous. The 308 joint stock companies in 1913 commanded a paid-up capital of $165,000,000. The average dividend, 13.95 per cent., was the highest in all branches of trade except insurance.

The number of Jewish schools of all kinds now built or under construction with all-geared or part-geared turbine machinery is 126, with an aggregate of about 1,000,000 horsepower.

There are about 2,000 female authors, editors, journalists or reporters in England and Wales.

There is an electric railway, ten miles long, in the South Tyrol which is operated entirely by adhesion, though the maximum gradient is 6.2 per one hundered.

An Easy Way to Increase Weight

Good Advice for Thin Folks

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on dragging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on lotions, "fish creams," or forcing some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Sargol is a remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been named the greatest of flesh-builders. Sargol aims thoroughly its regenerative, reconstructive powers to correct deficiencies and constitutional faults and to aid the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken-down cell and tissue of your body. You can readily picture the result when this amazing transformation has taken place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, hollows around your neck, shoulders and bust disappear and you take on from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Leading druggists of Boston and vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.

Is Man or Woman the More Selfish?

Ask Yourself the Question and Draw Your Own Conclusions

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

EVERY one in the world is selfish at heart. Some of us think we are not and others of us like to be told we are not, but if our minds could be dissected and read there would be found in each case a region of gray matter held by the ogre we call selfishness.

He would be intrenched there and armed with arguments as native as a submarine and reasons as cogent as a seventy-five-centimetre gun, always ready for business, always alert and always ingratiating.

Have you ever stopped to think what selfishness is?

Has it ever occurred to you that what you may like to term self-sacrifice is Selfishness dressed up in one of his many disguises. For he is the greatest Masquerader in the world!

Look around you and ask yourself how many persons you know who are unselfish? How many persons strive to make others happy and do so at a cost to themselves?

Would you consider it unselfish if you were worth a million dollars if you gave five dollars to a beggar?

Would you consider it unselfish if you gave up going somewhere to please a friend when you really did not want to go?

The man who comes home because he has nowhere else to go is not particularly unselfish. The woman who never corrects her children is not unselfish. The child who has learned to be automatically polite is not unselfish.

I knew a man who earned about forty dollars a week. He had a host of friends and he was in continual demand. Then his wife was taken ill. He gave up his friends to take care of her and his children. She was in bed for years and he had to work hard at his office. Yet he always saw that the little boys and girls—there were four in all—had their breakfast with him, and he saw that they went to school promptly, and he made it his business that they were attentive to their mother. That man was unselfish—he was!

Selfishness knows not sex nor age nor condition. We do not have to read a Baconian essay to recognize it, even though it has as many varieties as the trees of a continent.

It is a universal disease with one cure.

The Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," when properly applied, is a never failing panacea for selfishness.

And the best part of it is it is one of the few medicines that the patient likes. It is followed by a certain glow of satisfaction that makes the cure totter in his stronghold.

You have heard again and again the remark that "all men are selfish," but this is a mere sounding phase, no more true than as if you said that all women are selfish.

The truth is that most of us have a lot of little ways that we call temperament, which are really selfishness wearing a mask.

You, Mr. Husband, are too tired to go to the theatre with your wife but not too tired to play bridge with Smith or Jones. Why? Because you prefer bridge to the theatre—you are selfish.

You, Mrs. Wife, are not too busy to give your time to charity, but far too busy to walk with your own children. You get no credit for the latter—and much praise for the former—you are selfish.

And so it goes—many a man and many a woman are governed by ulterior motives in doing apparently unselfish deeds—they act from selfishness.

How many times have you been really, truly satisfied with the knowledge that you have given something of yourself for the happiness of others—content that no one should know?

Take the woman who expects everything from a man who must have what she thinks is necessary at any cost. How about selfishness in a case like this?

There are men working their lives away for women who require everything but have nothing to give in return. They will not give even understanding, but are content to live like parasites. Too little, indeed, is said of the selfishness of this kind which is more deadly than the worst thoughtlessness.

There is too much complaint in this world and too little frank understanding among us of each other's capabilities. The woman who says a man to be really selfish is foolishly signing away her peace of mind, but the woman who dubs her husband selfish because he fails her in constant attendance is admitting her own fault.

How, When and Where

Counsel (examining domestic in a breach-of-promise case)—Was the defendant's air, when he promised to marry you, perfectly serious, or one of levity and jocularity?

Plaintiff—If you please, sir, it was all ruffled with him running his hands through it.

"You misapprehend my meaning," said counsel. "Was the promise made in all utter sincerity?"

"No, sir; it was made in the washhouse," replied the plaintiff, amid roars of laughter.

HOW TO STOP DANDRUFF AND LOSS OF HAIR

Here is a simple, inexpensive treatment that will almost always stop dandruff and scalp itching, and keep the hair thick, live and lustrous: At night, spread the hair apart and rub a little resinol ointment into the scalp gently, with the tip of the finger. Repeat this until the whole scalp has been treated. Next morning, shampoo thoroughly with resinol soap and hot water. Work the creamy resinol lather well into the scalp. Rinse with gradually cooler water, the last water being cold.

Resinol ointment and resinol soap usually heal eczema and similar skin eruptions. Prescribed by physicians for 20 years, sold by all druggists. For trial free, write to Dept. 11-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

'THE BLUE BIRD' AT THE MAJESTIC

Major Curley overlooked one of those barefoot dances when Maeterlinck's famous play, "The Blue Bird," opened this week at the Majestic Theatre for an engagement of two weeks.

Winning, dainty little girls whisk merrily about the stage with all the abandonment that is supposed to typify youth, merriment and happiness.

And scant notice is taken of it.

It would seem that it isn't so much the "going barefoot" that counts as it is the way it's done.

"The Blue Bird," as is widely known, is an exquisite fairy fantasy of the quest of the heart's desire, happiness. Maeterlinck believes that the soul of the grown-ups is the soul of a child; so the curtain rises on a small brother and sister, Tytyl and Mytyl, asleep in their beds in a wood cutter's cabin.

They are awakened by the fairy Beryiune, who bids them start on the quest for the blue bird, the symbol of happiness. She entrusts Tytyl with a magic diamond, the mere turning of which allows them to see the hitherto unseen. The diamond turns, and then—the cottage walls are transformed and sparkle as if they were precious stones. The old grandfather clock winks his eye, and out from it troops the hours who dance.

The leaves of bread leap from the pan. Fire, in waving vermillion and gold, steps from the fireplace. Water, like a young girl, with streaming hair and tearful eyes, emerges from the tap and begins to subdue Fire. The dog and the cat, who have been asleep, rise up in semi-human form and begin to talk to Tytyl and Mytyl. Sugar splits his paper wrapper and canters forth, breaking one of his barley-corn fingers to the children. The lamp falls mysteriously from the table, and Light, the loveliest of all, appears. Henceforth, she leads the children on their quest. All the animals and things transformed into speaking beings accompany them.

But Bread and Milk and Sugar conspire with Water, Fire and the Cat, who is treachery, to defeat the object of the search. The journey takes them through beautiful lands and also through regions of despair, and finally, after they have searched the awesome Palace of Night, the Kingdom of the Future, the Kingdom of the Past, and last of all the Land of Exquisite Happiness, they arrive back at the wood cutter's cottage. There—on the wall—a turtle dove is still in his cage. The children look at it with a thrill of joy, for it is blue. They have discovered happiness in their own home.

The little folks in the cast, George Dunn as the boy Tytyl and Eleanor Davidson as the girl Mytyl, were particularly charming, the boy displaying very cleverly the simple trust of a boy's heart in light, enacted by Martha Messenger. Ethel Brandon appeared as Mummy Tyl. The character presentations by John Sutherland as Bread, Henry Duggan as the Dog, Thomas H. Corles as the Cat and Isabella Le Page as Milk were charming or laughable as the occasion required.

The numerous dances were excellently done by the large number of girls. The scenic effects were very striking.

'SIN OF DAVID' AT THE PLYMOUTH

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"The Sin of David," a poetic drama in three acts by Stephen Phillips, the English writer, is being given its first production in Boston at the Plymouth Theatre by a company of English players, most of whom were members of the Shakespearean stock at the Boston Opera House. The play is inspired by the Biblical story of King David and the pretty wife of Uriah, his general, whom he secured by arranging that the general should die gloriously upon the field of battle.

The setting is England of the Cromwell period and the hero a Puritan general whose love for the wife of one of his officers causes him to adopt the device of David.

It is in blank verse, and much of the verse is very charming. Phillips, better than most modern playwright poets, has succeeded in metrical drama. Just the same, the age of blank verse has passed in the English drama and is never likely to return.

Nowadays we go to the play to see a mimic world which really mimics the world we live in. The public demands realism, and poetry, however pretty, is not realistic.

There have been few successful plays dealing with the Roundhead-Cavalier period, and those which have succeeded usually favored the Cavaliers. The Roundheads were a bleak, stern, joyless race and singularly uninteresting as personalities despite their great achievements.

In Stephen Phillips' play his Puritan general is a reformed Cavalier, and even a reformed Cavalier has his points. And the heroine is a French Huguenot, so these two shed some light upon the gloomy background of Puritan devotees.

George Relph, the leading man of this stock company, is a very ingratiating youth, handsome, debonair and graceful. Yet he reads his blank verse in a choppy, indistinct manner, and the greater his emotion the more overclouded becomes his diction. Viva Birkett, who plays Miriam, the wife, is a cold but agreeable personality who handles her lines very expressively. Franklyn Dyall as the Puritan colonel, who is sacrificed so his wife may be a widow was the big figure in the play. He was tremendously impressive and his blank verse fas as rich and sonorous as the author could have wished to hear.

A fantastic little comedy, called "The Van Dycke," by Cosmo Gordon Lennox, followed. This is really merry and bright and employs most effectively Claude Beerbohm, Leonard Mudie and Frank Conroy.

MAE MARSH, who captivates as Flora in great film spectacle.

MAE MARSH REAL PRODIGY OF FILMS

Miss Mae Marsh, who will be seen as the captivating little Flora in D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre beginning Saturday, is a prodigy of filmdom.

The young girl, who lives near Los Angeles, met so many rebuffs at first that she almost gave up hope of a stage career. A small job at spearholding with the "merry, merry" was at last promised her. While awaiting this, she decided one day to sneak behind "big sister" to the motion picture studio where the latter was employed. The tall director, Mr. Griffith, saw the young stranger and asked her whether she wanted to act. Everybody laughed.

Griffith was in earnest, however. He saw under the freckles a visage born to comedy and tragedy, the high lights and deep shadows of feeling. He sensed also a temperament of electrical quality. Under his tutoring she lost some of the awkardness and kept the rest for "slavey" parts. Fine frocks made a wonderful difference. The other actors found that Mae Marsh, with equal facility, could queen it in a palace or play a part in a kitchen.

This chameleon quality led the director to entrust her with important characters. Lately he has been using her in the very greatest emotional roles. Everybody in New York, when "The Birth of a Nation" was produced there, felt that the biggest individual hit—with the possible exception of Henry Walthall, playing the hero—had been achieved by Mae Marsh.

Social Workers Give Fire Alarm

Miss Amy H. Hamburger and Miss Lillian Spellman, social workers living at the Elizabeth Peabody Settlement House on Charles street, gave an alarm early today for fire in a tenement building nearby at No. 29 Auburn street. Miss Hamburger was awakened by smoke ascending to her window, three floors above the tenement roof. Miss Spellman telephoned the fire department and called to the tenement dwellers, who were shrieking for fire engines, that the department had been notified. The fire burned up through the air-shaft from basement to roof. Three families were driven out by smoke.

Four Firemen Hurt at Philadelphia Fire

PHILADELPHIA, April 7. — Four firemen were injured and twenty overcome by smoke in a fire which swept through the six-story warehouse of the Columbia Storage Company today. During the fire hundreds of persons living in nearby buildings moved their furniture to the street. The loss was $150,000.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, say a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse, again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome; get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.—Advertisement

FORSYTH SUED FOR $275,000 BY 85

Eighty-five persons, each with $3,000, have been brought by Thomas A. Forsyth, who lives at Touraine, by objecting creditors of North American Rubber Company.

It is alleged that in 1910 Forsyth negotiated in behalf of the Belting Company a contract with the North American Rubber Company, a corporation which was established for the purpose of manufacturing substitute for rubber, and by the terms of this alleged contract the rubber company was to sell the Belting Company the entire output for a long period at sixty cents a pound.

At the time of the alleged contract the plaintiffs the rubber company and one Wheeler and one Shaw, the alleged promoters of the project, were heavily indebted, it is said, and were unable to discharge their indebtedness.

By an alleged contract it is claimed the Belting Company agreed to produce the entire output of the rubber product and to pay $1.a pound for it, and by another contract the Rubber Company is alleged to have agreed to pay back to the Belting Company forty cents out of every dollar paid by the Belting Company.

The plaintiffs claim the representations were wholly false and that the Rubber Company did not own a secret product, protected by patents.

They claim that the representations that Forsyth had for six months experimented with the product are false and that instead of the Rubber Company being a commercial success it turned out to be a commercial failure.

Mrs. Ahern, 85, Dead; Had 83 Descendants

Eighty-three descendants survive Mrs. Catherine Ahern, who is dead at her home, No. 27 Vining court, Woburn, at the age of eighty-five. She was the widow of John Ahern. Born in Ireland, she came here in girlhood and lived the rest of her life in Woburn. She leaves five sons, two daughters, forty-two grandchildren and thirty-four great grandchildren.

ANN WITHINGTON, delegate to Women's Peace Congress at The Hague

As delegate to the Women's Peace Conference at The Hague Miss Ann Withington has left Boston to sail from New York on the Frederik VIII. She goes as representative of the Massachusetts Political Equality League, and also as delegate from the Trades Union League. On the same boat will be Madam Rosika Schwimmer of Hungary, Mr. and Mrs. William Lloyd of Chicago and Dr. Margaret Lloyd of Boston.

"Our efforts may be futile, but we shall have at least shown our sympathy and readiness to stand by our sisters across the water," said Miss Withington. "Jane Adams and the women who will be behind her are not the ones to sit quietly when such a tremendous issue is at stake. We may do something startling, even dramatic that will compel attention from rulers who have been too busy to heed any call for truce.

CHICAGO SWEPT BY REPUBLICANS

CHICAGO, April 7—Returns compiled early today indicate that William Hale Thompson, Republican, was elected Mayor of Chicago by 17,621 majority, over Robert M. Sweitzer, Democrat. Other city offices were won by the Republicans by about 75,000 majority and the city Council is Republican, for the first time in five years.

The vote on votes were divided between the candidates in about the same proportions as the men.

Of the total vote of 69,648, the women cast 24,248.

The Socialist vote was 23,826 and the Prohibition Party cast 2,20

About 8 per cent of the three quarters of a million votes registered were cast. According to election officials his set a record.

Some wards hitherto considered strongly Democratic were carried by the Republican candidate and Sweitzer's own precinct in the heart of one of the West Side Democratic strongholds was carried by Thompson, 200 to 56.

Mr. Sweitzer Thompson was born in Boston in 1869 and was brought to Chicago by his parents the following year.

Reports from down-State counties in Illinois today, where the question of licensing saloons was voted upon yesterday, indicated that sixty saloons in those counties were put out of business. The counties also going saloons were Franklin, Jasper and Marion. The dries now having fifty-five of the 102 counties in Illinois.

Complete returns, the dry leaders assert will put Cass and Livingston counties in the dry column. Of the forty-eight township in which elections were held, thirty voted dry.

Wins $1,000 Verdict Against 'L' Road

A verdict of $1,000 was returned in the Superior Civil Court today in the $10,000 damage suit brought by Alice M. Roberts against the Boston Elevated Railroad Company. Mrs. Roberts sued for injuries received while riding on a car August 5, 1913. The jury reported its verdict after being out all night.

Billy Sunday Fails to Wake Up Paterson

PATERSON, N. J., April 7—"Billy" Sunday will have to go some" to arouse the residents of this manufacturing industrial town, here tonight, the Tabernacle evangelist will open the Tabernacle here tonight.

Paterson is not an enthusiastic city for baseball in the league New Jersey to which it belongs. Paterson's baseball team, Mr. Sunday thinks "That condition exists all over the country. Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, New York and Brooklyn are baseball towns, but towns in more outlying districts have little interest in baseball."

Those for Mr. Sunday have collected in Hall, where the new tabernacle, where the services are being conducted, cost $114,000. Mr. Sunday expressed the opinion that Paterson will be worse to "get" before he calls for final victory. Mr. Sunday's biggest task in Paterson has been to arouse interest in the Bible. He has to begin using to be called the Bible evangelist, straight from the shoulder.

"I would not for a minute that the Devil would love, duck and dodge to the ring," he cried. "He would like the services are being conducted, cost $114,000. FLAYS DIRECTORS, CALLS HALL GOAT

John A. Hall, former treasurer of the Southbridge Savings Bank was the guest for the whole crowd at Southbridge on Columbus Day, Edward Montague of Southbridge and the special orator, the guest of the day, Governor Walsh of Boston.

"I have always thought that the directors and trustees of the bank were responsible for fraud," said Montague. "They should have known that Hall was spending more than his salary or should have looked to the matter long before the end."

Councilor Fred Houghton of Hyde Park, the owner of the property next to 1020 Hyde Park Hall parson said he could not do business because the public would be suspicious. He said he does not feel changed now.

JOHNSON ADVISES WILLARD.

He told Willard not to be foolish as he and other champions have been and throw away his money. He is a great object lesson for all athletes, he said.

Willard Signs Up for Session on Stage Makes First Appearance in New York

Willard Got Only Glory Out of Bout; No Money for Him

HAVANA, April 7—It developed here today that Jess Willard got only glory out of his fight with Jack Johnson. The big Kansas cowboy smiled when he admitted it. His agreement was to take one-half of whatever money was left after Johnson's $35,000 and the expenses were taken out. Jack Curley gave out the official figures as $75,000. He said that he just did make expenses but that all hands expected to clean up on the moving pictures of the contest.

...presents an innate genius for avoiding work

Jones is unquestionably a good developer of fighters; but while he is able to make champions, he does not possess the faculty of making champions particularly popular.

Willard is a fellow whose appearance and personality should bring him great popularity during his championship career; but it would not be at all surprising to see Jones adopt a course that will eventually have just the opposite effect.

It is that Jones plans to have Willard work a few times in a couple of years, and most public of fighters believe this will be fatal to Jess ...ng life.

In the best years the Kansan is twenty-seven years old, which is none too young for a fighter, because he is nearing that stage when the weight he picks up is likely to become plastered to the ribs. Willard is already showing a tendency to lose on weight and two years of training of the ...ness would leave him as big as a house.

In the second place unless he does some flashy sparring public will practically certain to raise the cry that he beat an old man and is not a real champion.

Another thing Willard does not know enough about fighting as yet to be able to afford to keep out of the ring. He is a very ...ple style in every way and it is going to take a lot of drilling to smooth off the rough edges.

Photographs of the knockout were sold around Havana at $3 each and the first supply was soon exhausted. The pictures show that as Johnson let fly on his back in Willard's corner with Welch counting ...him, the Negro had his gloved hands over his eyes as if to protect his eyes from the blinding sun.

Johnson came out of the fight without a scratch, but had he tried to go on in the feeble condition, granting that he could have got to his feet after the knock down, Willard would have given him a severe buffeting.

His request to get his wife out of the arena may have been prompted by fear that harm might befall her at the hands of some boz, but more likely the negro's vanity remained with him even after he did not have a punch in either hand, and he did not want her to see him knocked out.

HARVARD WRESTLER PICKED TO WIN THE MIDDLEWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP OF N. E.

RED SOX LOOK FOR BETTER PITCHING

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 7.—The Red sox felt more confident of defeating the Louisville Colonels today for two reasons. First they would present better pitchers than they had yesterday and second they would not face as good pitching as the colonels showed yesterday. The first clash between the two trains resulted in a defeat for Boston 5 to .

As a matter of fact the score should have been 2 to 2, for in spite of the double umpire system that prevailed, one of the officials missed a clear out at first which would have retired the Colonels without a run in the third inning.

But the umpire called the man safe and then the Colonels began to bat Guy Cooper's delivery, pounding out three runs before the last man was retired. In the fourth the Colonels fell on Cooper again for a double and a three bagger, scoring another run. Harry Hooper had a fine workout chasing the long drives to right field.

Ralph Comstock pitched the last three rounds and let the Colonels down with only one safe hit, a hot grounder to Gardner, which Larry was not able to field in time. But Comstock made a balk soon after and then Scott let a grounder go through his legs, allowing another run.

In the meantime the Red Sox were hammering away at the Louisville pitchers, but only in the first inning could they get anyone over the plate. They started in on Northrop, who led the American Association last year, as if they meant business. Hooper soaked the first ball pitched for a two-bagger and Janvrin beat out a bunt; Speaker's sacrifice fly and Gainer's single followed, scoring the only tallies credited to the Sox.

With pitching such as Cooper and Comstock are capable of producing, it is quite likely the Red Sox would be beaten oftener than they would win.

With pitchers like Leonard and Shore, who are to pitch today, in the box, the boys always feel that they are bound to win. The loss of the game yesterday will do them more good than harm. It will make them work all the harder.

Louisville appears to have a pretty good ball team. Jack Hayden, former right fielder of the Red Sox, is the manager, Eddie Miller, a former Lowell player, is on second; Plitt, who was with Providence last year, plays left field; Daniels is in right and Midkiff, former Yank, has an infield position, while Osborne, formerly of the Phillies, plays centre and Derrick, formerly of the Athletics, is at short.

LANGFORD-M'VEA GO CREATES TALK

The local boxing "fans," who showed remarkable interest in the championship bout between Jess Willard and Jack Johnson, in which the title changed hands, are now all talking about the coming battle at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night, between Sam Langford and Sam McVea.

While nobody is anxious to detract anything from Willard's victory, still, there are numerous followers of the game in this city who are firmly convinced that either Langford or McVea could have won from Johnson if given the chance. The accounts of the exhibition between McVea and Johnson, credited McVea with being cleverer and more aggressive than the new ex-champion, and that exhibition gave the only true line on Johnson's real condition.

The possibility of either Langford or McVea getting a chance to box Willard in a return one, as the champion will probably not engage in a contest for nearly a year. The loser of Tuesday's match will lose what little chance there may be of ever getting a chance at the title, and for that reason the members of the Atlas A. A. can rest assured they will witness a rugged contest when the final gets together.

The full program has been arranged. It consists of a five-round bout between Tommy Doris of Cambridge and Johnny Murphy of South Boston; a six-round bout between Henry Miers of Charlestown and Joe Boodreau of Malden; and an eight-round bout between Charley Sheppard of New York and Larry Burns, the hard-hitting Lawrence featherweight.

Boston Tennis Star Loses Title Match

Hard and steady service, combined with effective backhand strokes, gave S. S. Cutting of New York a victory over Philip Stockton of Boston in the second day's play of the national amateur court tennis championship in singles at the Tennis and Racquet Club. The scores were 6—3, 6—2, 6—2. Payne Whitney of New York and G. C. Brooks of Philadelphia defeated C. G. W. Wightman of the B. A. A. and Dr. G. S. Darby of the Tennis and Racquet Club, respectively.

19-Year-Old Boy Wins Pinehurst Final

PINEHURST, N. C., April 7.—Fillmore K. Robinson, the nineteen-year-old star, won the thirty-six hole final round in the united North and South amateur golf championship, defeating J. Topping, winner of the title in 1915.

SCHOLASTIC SPLUTTERS BY DOC.

Coach Dan O'Flaherty is considering Stanley Clifford, the Roslindale lad, for the position of first baseman on the English High baseball team. Clifford has shown remarkably well in practice games and O'Flaherty believes that with a little more experience he will rank among the best schoolboy ball players of the season.

The High School of Commerce ball tossers, under the coaching of "Skip" Sherlock, are working out daily on the Washington street playground. The boys formerly divided the field with the nine from West Roxbury High. The latter have moved to Pierce field.

The Newton High school nine will remain idle until their field at Newtonville is in better condition. There was a lot of snow on the ground yesterday and Coach Hutchinson thought it best to let the boys lay off until they could play without endangering their health.

Charlie Sullivan, who held down third base for the High School of Commerce three years ago, will be tried out as a catcher by the Lawrence club of the New England League this season.

Three former Newton High players are now members of Harvard's varsity nine. The boys who formerly represented the Orange and Blue baseball team are Nash first base, Fripp centrefield and Whitney, who shared pitching honors with Bob Spaulding.

Dave Henry, the old Brown University and Mechanic Arts High player, is developing a fast nine out of the material on hand from the Country Day School. Gussie Thorndike, who will be on the receiving end of the team this year, is showing excellent form, and Coach Henry expects that he will be a sensation before the season is over.

The following schedule of games has been arranged for the season by the management of Sharon High School baseball team:

April 17, Sharon at Mansfield. April 21, Sharon at Foxboro. April 24, Sharon at Canton. April 28, Foxboro at Sharon. May 15, Foxboro at Sharon. May 22, Sharon at Mansfield. May 29, Mansfield at Sharon. May 31, Sharon at Canton. June 5, Canton at Sharon. June 9, Stoughton at Sharon. June 12 Sharon at Medfield.

Again the authorities have placed a ban on what is known as "vacation practice." An order recently sent the coaches of the various schools, asked that they warn the schoolboys not to play baseball during the vacation period. This is tough on the athletes, but a great deal tougher on the coaches, who hoped to take advantage of the no-school period and cut their squads almost to playing numbers.

HARVARD MAN OUT FOR MAT HONORS

Alfred K. Kelley of Cleveland, a first year student in the Harvard Law School, is the favorite to win the 145-pound wrestling title at the New England amateur championships scheduled for Friday night in the armory of the Lawrence Light Guards at Medford.

Kelley is a clever grappler. As a undergraduate at Yale he was the best man at his weight and at present he holds the 145-pound and 175-pound championship at Harvard.

Three of last season's champions are entered again: Tommy O'Hara, of the Boston Y. M. C. U. C. Johnson, of the Swedish Posse Gym, and A. Kolchsts, of the Fine C. A.

John Kolkis, the 125-pound champion, will not compete, as he is now on the road to Prince for the big championships, having won the opportunity by cleaning up in the class at New York in the Eastern trials.

Thirty-five to forty entries are expected for Friday's carnival. The referees will be Jr. Paul Withington of Harvard, Dr. Walter Powers of the Boston Y. M. C. A. and Arthur Baxter of the Lawrence Light Guards.

Seek Injunction Against Former Cub

CHICAGO, April 7.—An injunction to prevent Pitcher George McConnell from playing with the Chicago Federals, with whom he has just signed, probably will be sought by the Chicago National Club, according to President Thomas.

Mr. Thomas said $2,000 had been spent by the Chicago National League Club on McConnell; $2,500 of which was paid to the Buffalo International for him, and $500 in railroad fares and training expenses.

Mahan Fastest Man in Crimson Squad

Eddie Mahan, the Harvard football captain and baseball pitcher, proved the fastest man in the latter squad when he outsprinted every candidate for the team. This sort of practice was arranged by Dr. Sexton in order to vary the usual routine. F. P. Coolidge, '13, was second and Charley Brickley, '13, third.

Bowdoin Square Is Bowling Champion

The Bowdoin Square team won the championship of the Greater Boston Bowling League. Rowe's Wharf finished second and Harvard third. The season closed last night.

"The Rabbit's" Column By Walter J. Maranville SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

DURHAM, N. C., April 7.—One of my reporter friends received a letter from President Joseph J. Lannin of the Red Sox the other day and he gave me permission to publish part of it in my column. Mr. Lannin writes:

"Everything is in fine shape with the Red Sox and the team looks good. We are not making claims for the championship yet, but hope to be 'up there' fighting when the bell rings.

"I am glad to know that the Braves are in such fine condition and hope that they will repeat in 1915."

These few brief sentences show the kind of man Mr. Lannin is better than columns of reading matter could. He is not boastful about his team, but courageously hopes for the best. It is my earnest wish that the Red Sox win the American League pennant, as I would like to see the World's Series staged right in Boston. Unlike many baseball magnates, the Red Sox owner has a kind word to say about his rival. He wishes the Braves success and hopes that they will repeat during the coming season.

Mr. Lannin is today a great power in organized baseball. He is one of the real big men connected with the national pastime and played a mighty part in preventing disaster to organized baseball when the Federals threatened to turn things upside down. Now in baseball as a club owner, Mr. Lannin mastered the business end of the sport very quickly and proved that he is one of the most influential persons connected with the game. He prevented Tris Speaker and Hay Collins from jumping to the outlaws at a time when the addition of a few star players would have established Gilmore's circuit.

Mr. Lannin also came to the rescue of the International League when that organization was having hard sledding. He purchased the Providence club and backed it heavily with his money. So now he has made it possible for Patsy Donovan, and a couple of more experienced baseball men to get control of the Buffalo team in the International League. Buffalo was a losing proposition last year as a result of the Federal League invasion of that city, but Mr. Lannin is confident that there will be a different story to tell during the coming campaign.

The members of our club are anxiously looking forward to our games with the Washington Senators. The men led by Griffith will give us the hardest test which we have received since we started our training trip. The Braves have been a busy gang of young men, but they have won almost all of their games with ease. Our opponents have played hard, fast baseball, but they have been outclassed.

It will be a different story when we battle the Senators. Washington is represented by a strong club and possesses enough class to make things interesting for any man's ball club. The majority of the wise men are picking the Red Sox to win the American League pennant. Personally I believe that Carrigan's team has the best chance to win the flag in the American League during the coming season. But if the Red Sox fail to come through, I believe that Griffith's team will grab off the championship.

Walter Johnson has been forced to do the bulk of the work in the box for the Senators in former years and it is almost impossible for a club with only one great pitcher to win a championship. Washington now has a couple of promising young hurlers, and if they come through in 1915 the team from the Capital should set a lively pace for the other clubs in the Johnson circuit.

The Federal League is having its troubles these days. The backers of the outlaw circuit have lost over half a million dollars in their venture, and the chances are that they will drop more money this year. The Federals are no longer spending money foolishly. They refuse to pay large salaries to any but star ball players, which proves that they have profited by their experience of 1914 when many mediocre players secured contracts from the Federals calling for fabulous salaries.

Country-wide Ban on Fight 'Movies'

WASHINGTON, April 7.—If American fight fans have any expectations of viewing the moving pictures of the Willard-Johnson fight, they will have to go abroad to see them. There is not even the remotest possibility of their being shown in this country. The Sixty-second Congress passed a law which prohibits the importation of prize fight films or pictures for exhibition purposes, and prohibits the movement of such films, taken in this country, from one State to another. They may not be sent through the mails or in any other way, nor received by individuals. One may be fined $1,000 or imprisoned a year, or both, for violating the law.

The law was enacted because of race riots following the exhibition of the Johnson-Jeffries fight films.

Royal Rooters Plan Braves' Reception

The Braves will be tendered a regular reception by the Royal Rooters in Convention Hall on the evening of April 16. Invitations have been accepted by members of the Boston and Philadelphia club. Each player will be introduced individually.

George Brickley to Play with Lawrence

George Brickley, brother of Charley Brickley, the noted Harvard football player, has signed a contract to play with the Lawrence Club of the New England League during the coming season. Brickley was formerly a member of the Athletics.

Extra Pair of Pants FREE

The buy of my life. The representative of an English house comes to me with a proposition and a story which is as follows:

"My house, in anticipation of big business, early last Fall manufactured a lot of fine goods for shipment to Germany, Austria, and the countries that are now fighting. These goods are stored in our immense warehouse and we will be lucky if we survive the shock." Upon the recital of this story I puchased hundreds of yards of gray worsteds, to my mind the finest purchase I ever made. The predominating colors are gray, both light and dark. Then I made him an offer on thousands of yards, which, if accepted, will mean that I will run on English goods the rest of this season.

The goods I bought I placed in my Boston and Providence stores. Gray worsted suitings, suit to order, including extra pair of trousers of the same goods, FREE..... $15.50

From another source I buy a great quantity of Priestley's Serge. These are in blue and black for colors. They weigh ten ounces and feel up twelve ounces. They are stamped with the genuine Priestley stamp and bear the genuine Priestley tickets. I will guarantee them for color for the life of the garment. To each customer ordering suit in the next ten days, I present FREE an extra pair of trousers, giving you option on the same goods or something in a striped worsted. Suit to order, including extra pair of trousers..... $15.50

SHERRIFF WORSTEDS. The inside story on so many pieces of Sherriff Worsteds that I find on the market off price today, I don't know. I only know that America boasts of no finer goods than Sherriff manufactures. I have these in through and through worsteds and a variety of French back Worsteds. They run from 14 to 18 ounces in weight. I have a great number of pieces of these goods. My price will be, SUIT TO ORDER, INCLUDING EXTRA PAIR OF TROUSERS..... $15.50

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular at the start and not so active during the first half hour as yesterday. Bethlehem Steel reflected the statement by President Schwab that dividends for the common stock had not even been considered. U. S. Rubber was a strong feature. The price range was not so broad as it has ruled of late. Most leaders showed only fractional changes in either direction.

Early gains in Boston included: Alaska, under the lists; 6s Superior 5s, Copper Range 5s, Greene Cananea 5s, Isle Royale 5s, Osceola 5s, Quincy 5s, United Fruit 5s and Wolverine 5s. There was not much trading locally, outside of coppers.

In New York the American Sugar was up a point and there were fractional gains for Amalgamated, Chino, Utah and some other coppers. Motor issues were not so strong as a group. Goodrich and Studebaker being fractionally off and others in less demand. Bethlehem Steel, Lehigh Valley, Westinghouse advanced ¼. Among railroads only one small gain was noted, Chesapeake & Ohio. Erie, New York Central, Northern Pacific and Southern Pacific. Baltimore & Ohio, Illinois Central, Pacific, Pennsylvania, Reading and Union Pacific had modified fractionally. Steel was up ¼.

FOREIGN TRADE REPORT.

The Department of Commerce reports regarding this country's foreign trade for the week ended April 3 that the balance in favor of the United States amounted to $21,621,172. Exports were $37,245,904 and imports $15,781,524. Foreigners are buying American cotton on a gratifying scale. We shipped 224,260 bales in the week in question, making the total 3,741,513 since the war began.

FOREIGNERS BUYING STEEL.

Foreign buying of steel is on a large scale. It is figured that exports this month may total 300,000 tons and that shipments to the outside representing at present about 25 per cent. of steel mill production. Steel exportation for the first quarter of this year was about double the business done in that line during the last three months of 1914.

GOOD BUSINESS SIGN.

One encouraging business sign is the increase in postal revenues. They are supposed to reflect with great accuracy trade conditions in this country. They have been indicating an improvement for several months. Reports for March given out by the Postoffice Department indicate that business should be normal by midsummer, if the grain continues. Postal receipts began an decrease as soon as the war started, the lowest point being touched in November, when the decrease was 71 per cent. Then the tide turned. The December decrease was 4.37 per cents, the January decrease 4.73, February 4.59 and the March decrease 3.93 per cent. These percentages are based upon returns from the fifty largest postoffices in the United States and serve to indicate the business situation in every part of it.

COPPER IN DEMAND.

It is said that all records for domestic deliveries of copper were broken in March this year. Most of the output is being taken by the U. S. but where you will find somewhere to enthusiastically tell you that they are now cured but at one time were sufferers from rheumatism, or catarrh, or some severe form of skin or blood trouble. Get a bottle of S. S. S. today, but refuse any and all substitutes.

Hecla has got 17½ for prime Lake copper for July delivery.

SCHWAB IS OPTIMIST.

President Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation said after the annual meeting of the latter:

"I am an optimist regarding the outlook for American manufacturing and industry, and believe we have unlimited possibilities for development ahead of us. I believe it is not unlikely we shall get a great deal of the business Germany had in Russia. Russia annually purchases from Germany about $300,000,000 worth of steel rails, locomotives, machinery and other products."

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR CROSS, SICK FEVERISH CHILD

If Little Stomach is Sour, Liver Torpid or Bowels Clogged.

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed full of poisons, sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, sick or tongue is coated, then this pleasant delicious "fruit laxative" Children love it, and it cannot cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup. For sale by Riker-Jaynes and all good druggists.—Advertisement.

Massachusetts Farmers Ought to Ask the Grange Politicians a Few Pertinent Questions

The Republican organization at the State House has succeeded in defeating the recommendation which Governor Walsh made in his inaugural address for an inquiry into the price of milk.

In making this recommendation the Governor said:

"The farmers claim that the increase which the people are obliged to pay for their milk does not go to them, while the increase in the price of grain and farm wages has reduced the profits of milk production under ordinary conditions to the vanishing point. Upon the face of these facts there appears to be something strangely wrong. The milk situation is so important that we should know the truth about it as soon as possible. I therefore recommend that a commission of three competent citizens be appointed forthwith to inquire into all the facts pertaining to the situation, with power to summon witnesses and papers and to administer oaths, and report their findings to the Legislature, with such remedies as they deem feasible, not later than the 1st of next April, so that the present Legislature may act upon them."

The investigation was killed through the influence of the milk contractors, those middlemen who are charged with keeping the price of milk down to the farmers, from whom they buy it, and of constantly advancing it to the general public, to whom they sell it.

Governor Walsh did not say that this charge was true, but that its truth ought to be investigated. He did say, also, what, indeed, everybody knows, that the price the people are paying for their milk is going up out of all proportion to the price the farmers of Massachusetts are receiving. The Governor further believes that there is sufficient complaint that the relations between the milk contractors, the railroads and the milk producers outside of the State are unfair to the Massachusetts farmers, to make this question an added reason for a general inquiry into the whole situation.

The AMERICAN suggests that the farmers of this State ask the Republican politicians of the State Grange why they allowed the Governor's plan for an investigation of this important question to be killed. With their help the bill could have been passed.

The AMERICAN suggests another question which the farmers ought to ask these Grange politicians. The farmers are entitled to know what is the real reason why these partisan Republicans in the Grange are so sympathetic with Mr. Walker, whom Governor Walsh removed because the State Commission on Finance and Economy found him guilty, among other things, of negligence in permitting the introduction of the foot and mouth disease into this Commonwealth.

If the farmers want the truth about Animal Commissioner Walker, let them write to the Governor for the evidence in the case, including Mr. Walker's own admissions.

A Little Word Anent the Willard-Johnson Prize Fight

Said Champion Willard of his vanquished opponent:

"I want to say for Johnson that I have never fought a cleaner fighter. Not once did he resort to foul tactics; on the contrary, he tried always to make it a good clean fight. He has been the most criticised champion that ever lived, but I certainly found him a white man in the ring."

Among the things that have made the story of pugilism not altogether a chapter of human degradation, the possession of physical courage is by no means the only one. The sentiment that inspired Willard to utter the tribute quoted above indicates something more than mere grit.

This generous consideration for an opponent was not, moreover, confined to the white man. Said Johnson after his defeat:

"Everything is all right; the best man won. I take my hat off to Willard."

Courage is praiseworthy, but chivalry is nobler. Among pugilists it is commonly spoken of as "fair play." And when we consider the handicaps, limitations and temptations against which the negro Johnson has contended it would be nothing less than fair play to credit him with something of the chivalric quality. What we admire in a Bayard or a Du Guesclin cannot be wholly denied to this man, whose color, environment and opportunity were what they were.

The African hunter, Stewart Edward White, in one of his books speaks of a negro gun-bearer who had accompanied him on many lion-hunting adventures. This negro had always performed courageously that most trying of all human experiences, the carrying of the spare gun and standing staunchly by his master in the face of a charging lion. After taking leave of this faithful servitor at the termination of the expedition, Mr. White says:

"Memba Sasa had wives and a farm near town, neither of which possessions he had seen for a very long while. Nevertheless, he made no move to see them. When our final interview had terminated with the usual 'baas!' (it is finished), he shook hands once more and withdrew, but only to take his position across the street. There he squatted on his heels, fixed his eyes upon me, and remained. I went downtown on business. Happening to glance through the office window I caught sight of Memba Sasa, again across the street, squatted on his heels, his gaze fixed unwaveringly on my face. So it was for two days. When I tried to approach him, he glided away, so that I got no further speech with him; but always, quietly and unobtrusively, he returned to where he could see me plainly. He considered that our interview had terminated our official relations, but he wanted to see the last of the master with whom he had journeyed so far.

"One makes many acquaintances as one knocks about the world; and once in a great many moons one finds a friend—a man the mere fact of whose existence one is glad to realize, whether one ever sees him again or not. These are not many, and they are of various degree. Among them I am glad to number this fierce savage. He was efficient, self-respecting, brave, staunch and loyal with a great loyalty. I do not think I can better end this book than by this tribute to a man whose opportunities were not many, but whose soul was great."

Man to man—prize-fighter or gun-bearer—the color of a man must not be counted against the heart that is in him. The story of the affair at Havana would be much more delectable reading if we could omit the jeers from white lips that punctuated the stages of poor Jack Johnson's final desperate struggle and pitiful defeat.

The Art of Keeping Well

By ELBERT HUBBARD

THE art of keeping well is a matter of keeping busy.

I have never been sick an hour—never consulted a doctor.

My father is a physician.

He is ninety-four years old. My mother is eighty-five. Both are well, hearty, and work every day.

I was educated for a physician.

A man should live to five times the length of time that it takes him to reach his maturity.

He is physically grown at twenty—five times twenty is one hundred, so I am told.

Here is the receipe for living a hundred years:

FIRST—Deep breathing in the open air with your mouth closed.

SECOND—Moderation in eating: simple dishes; Fletcherize; eat fruit every day especially bananas.

THIRD—Exercise at least two hours in the open each day, walking, working in the garden, playing with the children.

FOURTH—Sleep eight hours in a thoroughly ventilated room.

FIFTH—Drink all the water between meals you care to.

SIXTH—Don't bother to forgive your enemies; just forget them.

SEVENTH—Keep busy. It is a beautiful world, and we must and can leave it more beautiful than we found it.

* * *

There are two classes of people in the world: Those who eat too much and those who eat too little.

Almost every one who has an unlimited quantity of food at his disposal overeats.

Fortunately, those in moderate circumstances who overeat have to work, and this is their salvation.

They absorb enough oxygen so that they burn up the slag.

God help the rich; the poor can work!

The necessity of getting a job and holding it down keeps most of us fairly decent.

Man needs opposition. When he has everything his own way he is in a very dangerous position. 'Tis then he makes a fool of himself, if ever.

The rich have a few diseases, with their other possessions, that are all their own. Bright's disease, cirrhosis of the liver, appendicitis, are all distinctly rich men's diseases.

Appendicitis comes from overeating, lack of physical exercise and medication.

Cirrhosis of the liver is distinctly a disease of men who use spirituous liquors, who under-exercise and under-breathe.

Bright's disease is the possession of the rounder, the booser and the man with a heart full of hate.

It is a tragic thing to think that in the big cities of America thousands of schoolchildren are underfed.

The child that has not had a good breakfast cannot study.

Growing youth needs nutritious food.

* * *

In the country and in the villages lack of food is only a pleasantry.

In the big cities are found the two extremes: The people who overeat and the people who are slowly starving.

Intelligence does not belong to any one class.

Certainly high intelligence is not the exclusive possession of the rich.

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell once said: "Ninety per cent. of all my patients are suffering from mal-nutrition. They eat about one-third more than they really need, and, as a consequence, are sick fully one-third of the time."

Meat once a day is quite enough for any one who works indoors. We should eat more fruit, salads, and less meat.

Then we should breathe deeply in the open air and sleep in well-ventilated rooms. Fresh air is free.

No class in the world needs education so much as the wealthy. "Lord, enlighten Thou the understanding of the rich," should be the prayer of every person who works for social betterment.

Science for Workers

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—"Many years ago, while on the lookout of a ship bound for Australia, I saw a meteor pencil a line of vivid light across the sky, and fall into the sea, so close that I was disturbed, pondering the swift blotting out of myself and mates if the next meteor should strike our ship. Is it not possible that some missing ships met their end in this manner?

"What effect would happen if a meteor—say half-mile in diameter were to fall in the Pacific a few hundred miles west of San Francisco? Would the wave created endanger the sea-bound miles of California?"—GEO. N. LOWE.

A.—If a ship should be hit by the 22-ton meteor on display at the fair at Portland, Ore., several years ago, it would surely sink. It is barely possible that ships have been sunk in this manner, as ancient history records that six humans have been killed by meteors.

A meteor half a mile wide falling into the sea a few hundred miles west of California would be too small to have any appreciable effects on the coast. A sensitive instrument might detect a little ripple or wave.

Q.—"Is it held to be a fact by astronomers that planetary bodies are spherical in form?

"Is there any seeming contradiction to this theory?

"Are there any methods of clearly proving the facts of astronomy?

"Is it not possible that images in telescopes might give false reflection; or, that the eye may make incorrect interpretation of them?

"Do not lenses take pictures of illusions as well as facts?"—WILLIAM TONSEND.

A.—All planets in the solar system are spheroidal in form, not exact spheres; oblate ellipsoids, as generated by ellipses revolving around their major axes. No astronomer holds to any theory of sphericity of planets, but proves their ellipticity.

Dorothy Dix Gives Some Basis for Matrimony

By DOROTHY DIX

WHAT are the signs and symptoms of the brand of affection that makes a safe basis for matrimony?

Are respect and suitability and congeniality of tastes enough to marry upon? Or must one have thrills and heart throbs and the glory and the circling wings of romance before one ventures into the holy estate?

This is the conundrum a man asks me to answer. He is forty-five years old, well-to-do, and he wants a home, and wife, and children. He desires to marry, but he hesitates to do so, because he cannot fall wildly, madly, passionately in love as he once did in his very early youth.

There's a widow, young and good looking, and the best sort of a chum, and with two little boys that he's devoted to, that this man knows. She'd make him a splendid wife and a comfortable home, and he has the warmest friendship for her, but he doesn't know whether to marry her or not, because she doesn't fill him with the same poignant emotion that his first sweetheart did.

Now, far be it from me to advise any human being to take that dangerous leap into the dark that we call matrimony. Every man's risk is on his own head in doing that, but I would call my correspondent's attention to the fact that it's a long, long way sentimentally from forty-five to twenty, and that at forty-five a man loves as differently from a boy as he eats differently or dresses differently.

When we are twenty everything is at high pressure with us. We are keen about every pleasure. We feel that we will never survive any disappointment. We are carried away by our enthusiasm. We are raised to the seventh heaven by a small success, and plunged into the depths by a little failure. We have boundless expectations. We hate fiercely and love fiercely, and the sound of the footsteps of the one for whom we have been waiting gives us heart failure, and sends hot and cold chills chasing down our spines.

By the time we are forty-five we have slowed down emotionally as well as physically. We no longer desire to hop and skip around and be forever doing something as we did when we were twenty. Experience has taught us to take good and evil fortune without being either puffed up or cast down. We have learned not to expect too much of other people, and there are, for us, no more little tin gods or goddesses, but just men and women, who are human and faulty as we are, and for whom we must make allowances as they must for us.

Therefore it is that the man of forty-five who is holding his finger on the pulse of his affections, and who thinks that he isn't in love because it doesn't jump to fever heat, is demanding the impossible of himself. At life our temperature is normal, but that doesn't prevent us from experiencing a deep and soul satisfying affection entering into a marriage far likelier to bring happiness than any youthful marriage.

It is likewise absurd for him to compare all other women with the memory of his first love and to find them wanting because they have not all the charms and graces with which his imagination has come to invest that dream mate.

The only two faultless creatures on earth are the man and the woman we didn't marry, and, believe me, none of us ever get such a shock as when chance throws across our pathway after the lapse of time the hero or the heroine of the blighted romance of our youth.

What man has not said in his soul: "Is this fat, frowsy, stupid woman with seven children the ethereal Leonore from whom I was cruelly parted, and whose image I have carried imprinted on my heart all these years?"

What woman has not confided to her pillow her chagrin when she recognized some bay-windowed, bald-headed, conceited ass of a man, whose wife was taking in boarders to support him, as the hero of her girlish dreams?

Times change and our tastes change with them, and there is no cure for an old love like taking a squint at it from our present point of view. Hence, any one who spends his life grieving over an old love is doing nothing more nor less than manufacturing trouble where none exists.

As a matter of fact, it is doubtful if there is any other basis upon which it is safer to marry than that of respect, suitability and congeniality of taste. These things last long after the mists of romance have been put to flight by the bright light of the work-a-day world and the fire of passion has burned down to ashes. No woman can keep up the pose of being an angel in the stress of cooking and sewing, and bearing and rearing children. No man can preserve the illusion that he is a demigod in the fierce white light that beats about the family circle.

And the attributes with which each has invested the other in the days of courtship are shorn from them, the man and woman who can still respect each other, who are still mutually helpful, and who are real comrades, have got the rock upon which to found a home against which the storm shall beat in vain. Their safety and happiness are assured.

In America we do not put enough stress on common sense in marriage, and it is significant that we lead the world in the number of our divorces, while in the countries in which the marriage of reason prevails divorce is rare.

Inklings and Thinklings

By WEX JONES

"Why not preserve eggs when they are cheap?" asked a writer. The only reason we know is that they're never cheap.

Life's mysteries: Asparagus tongs.

Vice-President Marshall says that the Americans are the greatest flunkies and lackeys in the world. Do you flunk or lack?

Judge cut down a woman's alimony on the ground that women don't eat so much as men and therefore can live less expensively. As women don't drink and smoke so much as men, the judge might have slashed the alimony quite a lot more.

Indiana man fasted fifty-seven days, then drank a glass of buttermilk. We'd rather have kept on fasting.

Juror said to have been flirting with plaintiff when he called her "a cute little cockroach." Would your idea of flirting be to call a girl a cute little cockroach, or would you call her a duck, or a chicken, or a cute kid? Oh, well—probably "it ain't exactly wot he says, but the sassy way he says it."

Life's mysteries: Unbreakable combs.

Chicago's Bureau of Public Welfare announces that wives will not be deserted if they are big physically. It isn't so much that hubby doesn't want to go as that he thinks of what would happen should he be caught.

Jobs we don't want: Getting the Sultan's wives to pack up in a hurry.

Looks as if the gifted correspondents from Mole St. Nicholas and Chefoo had both moved to Athens.

A compelling love story about a man divorced and a woman deserted. You will enjoy it.
